NEW WITNESS SAW BROWN WITH DYING WIFE, HOLDING SMOKING PISTOL

Woman Repeats Story Told Her by a Milkman, Who Went Into Brown Kitchen Just After Mrs. Brown Was Shot and Saw Her Bleeding to Death---Son Was Nowhere in Sight.

Mrs. W. W. Griswold, wife of a Roslindale business man, told the police today that a milkman named Derusha had admitted to her that he was in the house of Frank A. Brown just after Brown and his wife had been shot on Saturday, and while Brown was still alive.

According to Mrs Griswold, Derusha was delivering milk in the Brown home when he came upon the ghastly scene. Mrs. Brown was sitting in a chair, apparently dead from a bloody wound in her head. Brown was standing in a corner of the room with a revolver in his hand, so weak that he seemed about to drop.

Derusha, the woman declares, said he saw no bullet wound in the man's head. He was in such a position that he could not have seen it.

Willis H. Wilson, Brown's stepson, who is held by the police on suspicion, was nowhere in sight. Derusha is alleged to have said.

WARNED BY POLICE.

Derusha, when seen by an AMERICAN reporter to-day, refused to discuss what he witnessed on the day of the tragedy. He said he didn't want to be dragged into the affair, and declined to talk about the case or express an opinion.

It is evident that he has been warned by the police to refrain from saying anything, and he is obeying orders from the officials at police headquarters, the Medical Examiner and District Attorney Stevens in keeping mum.

The police now think that the father and son may have fought a duel with pistols, and that the mother and stepfather were both killed in the exchange of shots.

They immediately started to search for a second weapon and for traces of bullets, which may have lodged in different parts of the house during the duel. They also began a hunt for the milkman.

Before receiving the information from Mrs. Griswold, the police were of the opinion that Wilson had not told all he knew.

Medical Examiner Draper, after conferring with Captain McBryan and District Attorney Stevens to-day, decided to hold an autopsy upon the bodies of Brown and his wife to-morrow, and to detain Wilson pending the result.

When the double tragedy startled Roslindale on Saturday afternoon it was supposed that Brown, who was a scenic artist, had slain his wife Dora in a terrible rage because dinner was late, and that he had then shot himself, as told by Wilson. But one thing after another finally led the police of Station 13 and inspectors from Chief Watts' staff to reject this story, although they admit that the murder and suicide theory is not impossible.

Coat Burned and Bloody.

The police said to-day that they had learned from George Smith, a friend of the Brown family, that young Wilson had often made threats against his mother. His hatred for his stepfather was also said to be well known.

While everybody in Roslindale sympathizes with the young man, especially owing to his mental affliction, they are inclined to believe that he knows more about the tragedy than he has revealed.

Sunday afternoon Smith cleaned up the Brown home. He found a coat belonging to Wilson which had a large hole burned in it. It was also covered with blood stains. This fact the police look on as very significant.

Another thing which strongly convinces the police that Wilson has not told the truth is the appearance of Brown's body. Not only is it unlikely that right-handed man would shoot himself in the left side of

ROGER'S LETTER SHOW LAWSON DID ASK $1,000,000

Standard Oil Man Gives Out Text of Communication He Received from Boston Financier.

Far more important than the testimony in the big gas suit today, now that Thomas W. Lawson and the millionaires interested have left the stand, is Mr. Lawson's letter to the Standard Oil magnate, Henry W. Rogers, in which Mr. Lawson offers to settle the Bay State Gas controversy for $1,000,000 cash, or $1,500,000 in another contingency.

Mr. Rogers puts in the letter to refute Mr. Lawson's emphatic denial on the stand that he made any proposition.

The statement that Mr. Lawson wants $1,000,000 was made on the witness stand by Mr. Rogers and flatly contradicted by Mr. Lawson. Now Mr. Rogers offers the letter in support of his sworn statement.

HAD SPENT $500,000.

According to the letter Mr. aLwson said that he had spent $500,000 to $000,000 in the gas fight and had received nothing. The $750,000 on this figuring would have let him out at a profit of $150,000. In the letter received the second plan asks a $1,500,000 payment to Mr. Lawson and Mr. Rogers, the latter's half to be a practical loan to Mr. Lawson, in which the latter guarantees to make $3,000,000 in ninety days.

LETTER IN FULL.

Lawson, Arnold & Co., Members New York and Boston Stock Exchanges.
Boston, Feb. 11, 1904.

My Dear Mr. Rogers:

Mr. Albers has just reported to me that Mr. Hennessy and Mr. Beck called upon him and stated that Mr. Winsor says 10 per cent. of the New England Gas & Coke matter was to be paid to me through you; that I had received $75,000, $11,000 and $6,000 on account of it, and that the whole account had been balanced and there was some $5,200 due me, and Messrs. Hennessy and Beck asked Mr. Albers if I would agree this was the condition of the account.

Now, Mr. Rogers, while I am so indignant I can hardly argue the matter rationally, I will state the facts just as they were, and just as you know them to be, and about which there can be absolutely no misunderstanding.

First let me say: I would not turn this matter over to even Mr. Albers had it not come to me through second and third parties, showing that you no longer expect me to observe the absolute secrecy which you have from time to time requested that I observe in connection with this entire transaction.

All to Join Hands.

On March 8, 1902, you called me on the telephone and asked me if I would not go in with you and Messrs. Kidder, Peabody & Co. to settle up the entire gas situation. You called my attention to the fact that if we all joined hands it would be the best thing for the public and every one concerned, and by the plans as Kidder, Peabody & Co had them laid out, there would be enormous profits made. I said to you that I stood as I always stood—ready to go into any fair deal that would insure the public and all other parties in interest fair treatment, but that I wanted to know more of the plans and would have to have a firm agreement as to my share in the enterprise. You urged me to make you a definite proposition and that it must be done at once, as you were on the eve of going away. I said, "I will think it over and in a very short time give you an answer." And I give you herewith copy of my telephone message, delivered by Mr. Clapp and received by Miss Harrison at 11:50, A. M.:

"Delivered at 11:50 A. M., March 8, 1902, over short line by C. C. C. to Miss K. I. H.

"First: If anything is done, it will be through you, that is, I take your word absolutely on any agreement, and you go bail for mine for whatever I agree to do.

"Second: I will do nothing on contingent promises of theirs.

"Third: My expenses so far have been

BRITT BROKE ARM IN 8TH ROUND OF FIGHT

X-RAYS SHOW THAT HE FOUGHT TWELVE ROUNDS THUS DISABLED.

SAN FRANCISCO, March 29.—Jimmy Britt fought the last 12 rounds of his famous fight Friday night last with a broken arm. The fact was conclusively proved Monday by the use of the X-ray on the injured member, and it will be many weeks before the plucky young Californian will be in shape again to fight a severe battle.

The heavy hurricane fighting in the eighth round reopened the fracture he received in the fight with Cande, and from that to the end every blow with his right hand caused him intense pain. It will be several weeks before the fracture heals.

Harry Pollock and Willie Britt, brother and manager of Jimmy, met Monday and discussed the question of another fight. The local boy's manager said Corbett would be given the first chance, but could not say how soon Britt would be ready to re-enter the ring.

DUEL TO THE DEATH ON BOARD R. R. TRAIN

FATAL GUN FIGHT BETWEEN RAILWAY CONDUCTOR AND LEXINGTON, KY., SHERIFF.

BERGEN, Ky., March 29.—Queen and Crescent R. R. Conductor Beauchamp has been taken to Lexington in a dying condition, and City Marshal Will Daniels lies at his home here with three bullet holes in his arm, the result of a duel with pistols on the train of which Beauchamp was conductor.

The affair is the result of a contention between the municipality of Bergen and the Queen & Crescent train crews.

Recently several trainmen have been arrested and fined for the violation of city ordinances providing against the blockading of streets by waiting trains. Several days ago, it is claimed, a train under charge of Conductor Beauchamp laid at a crossing for a longer time than the ordinance permits, and a warrant was issued for the conductor's arrest. The instrument was placed in the hands of City Marshal Will Daniels to serve.

When the train pulled in under charge of Beauchamp the marshal was notified and, boarding it, attempted to arrest the conductor. The train started and the marshal insisted that it be stopped. Both then drew their revolvers and began shooting. The passengers fled or crouched beneath the seats while the determined men poured lead at one another.

After Daniels had been shot three times in the arm, Beauchamp sank to the floor, a bullet having pierced his left breast, just above the heart. Beauchamp was also shot in the arms. He was cared for temporarily by the train crew and passengers until surgeons could arrive.

THE WEATHER.

Fair to-night and Wednesday; warmer Wednesday; light to fresh variable winds becoming southerly.

LEPROSY IN PUBLIC SCHOOL

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 29.—The fact that a case of leprosy exists among the Filipino students sent to this country for education purposes has been kept a secret for several weeks by officials of the War Department.

Although the students passed medical examinations, both at Manila and San Francisco, the leprosy case was not discovered until after the youths were settled in schools here. The plague-stricken unfortunate has been sent back to the Philippines. It is believed the disease was not sufficiently developed to enable detection in Manila or San Francisco.

Rebuff for Kuropatkin.

ROME, March 29.—The Agenzia Libera to-day reports that a portion of the Russian Vladivostok squadron, the location of which has long been in doubt, has arrived at Nikolaievesk, Siberia, at the mouth of the Amur River.

The Agenzia further reports that a Russian army corps has left Harbin, Manchuria, for Chang Chun. General Kuropatkin, the Commander-in-Chief, has reached Mukden and established his headquarters there. One of his first acts, on arriving at Mukden, was to ask for an interview with General Ma, commanding the Chinese troops. Ma refused to be interviewed.

RETALIATION BY CHINA

HARBIN, March 29.—A message received here to-day states that the Chinese government is retaliating on Russia for declaring New Chwang under martial law. The Chinese maritime authorities have stopped vessels from taking fruit from Chinese ports to New Chwang.

LONDON, March 29.—Dispatches from New Chwang, Manchuria, indicate that there is danger of friction with foreign governments over the declaration of martial law by Russia at that port. If the action goes unchallenged, foreign Consuls will be

STOPS GAME OF TICKET JOBBER

Lawrence McCarty, manager of the Boston Theatre, this morning, when the sale of tickets was on for the grand opera, stationed at the box office two policemen, with orders to intercept any speculators trying to purchase tickets. Every effort possible will be made by Mr. McCarty to stop this practice.

Long before the box office opened this morning a vast throng had formed in line about the theatre, and it was necessary to divide the mass into two lines. People waited patiently for hours. Among the crowd were fashionably-dressed women, jostling each other in their eagerness.

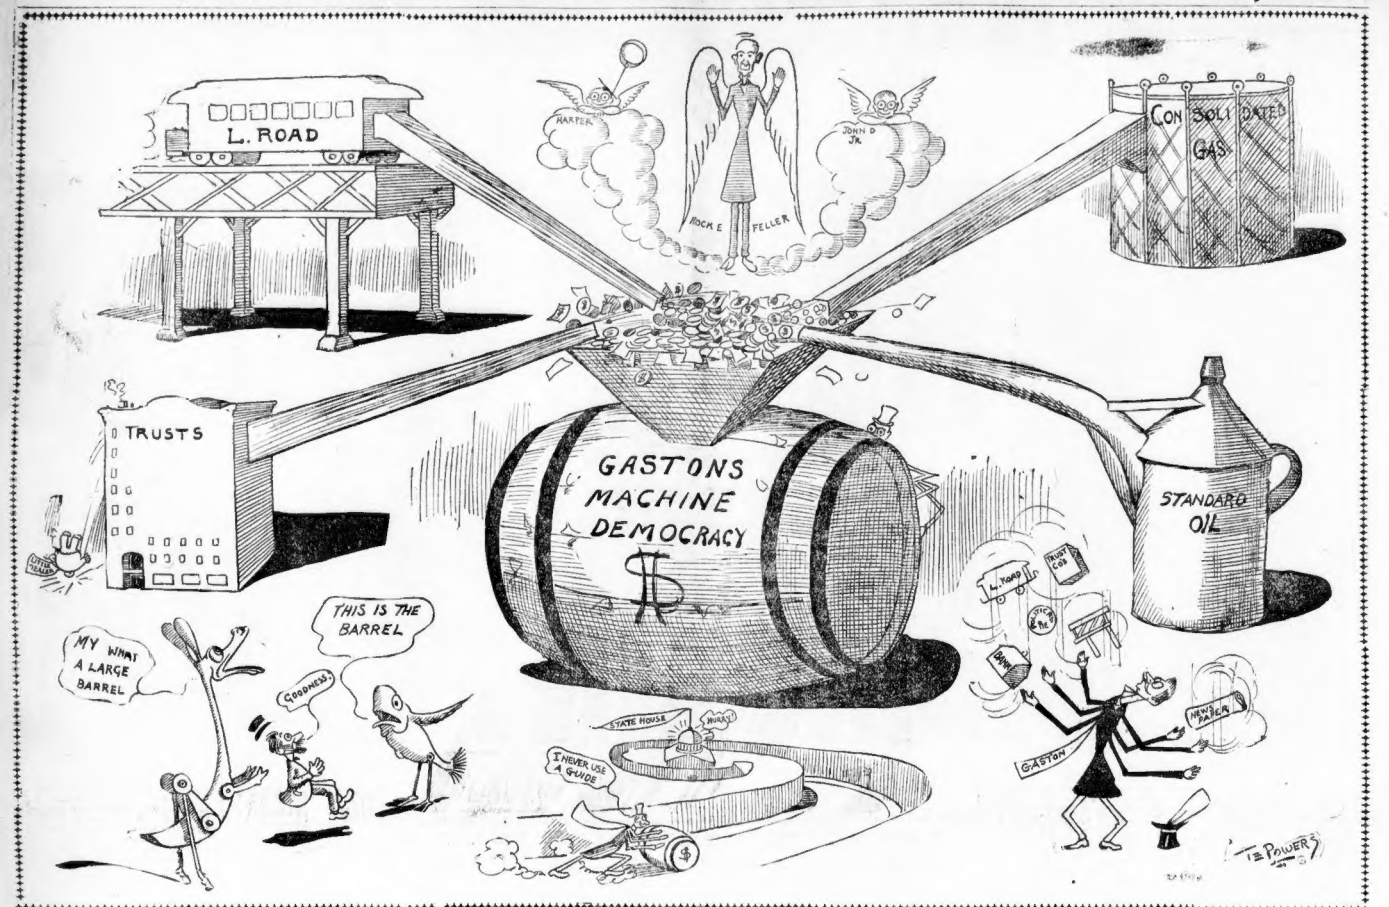
THE GASTON BARREL AND THE MACHINERY THAT KEEPS IT FULL



WARMER, AND FAST TRACK

Conditions at Bennings Brought Out Good Crowd for First Event.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—The weather was warmer and the track greatly improved to-day, which served to draw forth one of the largest attendances since the opening of the meeting, though three of the six events were maiden affairs. The card was a good one, and of a kind which afforded the ground speculators all manner of encouragement. Still, after the falldown of Fergus and Charley Moore yesterday, more than one of the public players went about things more cautiously than usual.

"If you can beat the game here you are welcome to it," declared a disgruntled bettor, as he lamented a bad day yesterday for he had gone with the mob and played nothing but the close-held favorites, any number of them falsely installed, too, and was out on the day. Still hardly any one expects consistent form so early in the year, and with so many diversified elements making up the composition of racing at this point just now the home of trained horses, many are catching their stride and within the week they will be holding their own.

Yesterday Mobican, Untercek and Little Woods took first honors, breaking even with the Western invaders. Watch for the home brews from now on.

The track was much faster to-day.

HIS ASHES FOR THE OHIO RIVER

LOUISVILLE, March 29.—Copies of a remarkable will left by Colonel C. M. Strader, U. S. A., retired, who died two days ago at St. Joseph's Hospital in Philadelphia, have been received by several prominent business men in Louisville, friends of the dead man.

Colonel Strader, after directing that all business debts be paid, declares that his body be cremated at Philadelphia and the ashes taken to Louisville, his birthplace, there to be scattered on the waters of the Ohio River.

WOULD KEEP HAT ON, SHE WAS FINED $10

New York, March 29.—Miss Frieda Lippert, a handsome young woman who achieved much notoriety a few years ago by suing Charles Peters, son of a millionaire brewer, of Union Hill, for breach of promise, has been fined $10 for refusing to take her hat off at a ball.

The floor manager, whose request she refused, had her arrested.

CZAR'S FLEET LEAVES PORT

LONDON, March 29.—A dispatch from Wei-hai-wei to the Times to-day states that a Chinese junk, which arrived there, reported having seen yesterday morning eleven Russian warships manoeuvring in the vicinity of the Japanese fleet, which was also manoeuvring. No firing was heard.

The Telegraph prints a dispatch from Yin-Kow to the effect that the Japanese bombardment at Port Arthur badly damaged the forward barbette of the Russian battleship Czarevitch.

BONDS DOWN ON WAR NEWS

LONDON, March 29.—Russian imperial 4 per cent. bonds declined ½ per cent. in the stock market to-day on the Seoul report of a Russian defeat by the Japanese. Bond issues of Japan, on the same news, advanced a point.

The Seoul despatch, which has not been officially confirmed, said that an engagement had occurred between Japanese infantry and Cossacks at a place between Anju and Chongju. The Japanese lost 50 men and the Russians 100. The latter were forced to retreat.

DISTRESS IN RUSSIA GREAT

ST. PETERSBURG, March 29.—The financial situation in many of the cities of Russia is fast becoming alarming. Most of the banks at Vladivostok have been closed on account of scarcity of ready money.

The rise in the price of food is also causing distress. At Warsaw, bread, potatoes and greens have quadrupled in price. Pawnshops are crowded, many private ones being forced to close. The charitable institutions are unable to relieve the distress. Robberies are increasing.

The same state of affairs prevails at Moscow and Kieff.

BALTIC FLEET TO SAIL.

St. Petersburg hears that Chinese, instigated by Japanese, have murdered a Russian civil engineer and several workmen on the railway near Chen Si, China.

The Russian cruiser Dmitri Donskoi and three torpedo boats that turned back from Jibutil have left Bizerta, Tunis.

* * *

Russia has ordered eight 2500-ton torpedo boats from the yards at Riga and Nevsky. They will be similar to the latest Japanese torpedo boats.

St. Petersburg hears that Chinese troops south of Manchuria are ready at any moment to turn against the Russian forces in the far East. Russia is very uneasy over conditions.

Russia will accept no more volunteers for the war. She already has enrolled 15,000 out of 60,000 who offered their services.

$150,000 FOR WEATHER WISE

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Any one who can find out what causes the weather and apply his knowledge to forecasting what the weather will be for thirty days at a time, can get $150,000 from the United States Government, if a bill introduced by Senator Hard, of California, becomes a law. This bill offers $150,000 in two prizes, one of $100,000 and the other of $50,000, for the discovery of the physical basis of meteorology.

AMERICAN IS BRITISH PEER

BALTIMORE, Md., March 29.—Albert Kirby Fairfax, formerly of Prince Georges county, Maryland, has recently been legally adopted by a wealthy Englishman and persuaded to wear the titles he is now able to support in a fitting manner. He has taken his seat among his peers in the British House of Lords.

Fairfax is the eldest son of the late Dr. John Contee Fairfax, of Prince Georges county, Maryland, and the inheritor of his titles of Lord Fairfax and Baron Cameron in the peerage of Scotland.

When Mr. Fairfax went to England two years ago, it was with no intention of appearing in that country as any other than an unassuming American citizen.

MAGUIRE HAS NO TONGUE NOW

(By Boston American Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, March 29.—Tom Maguire, the Rialto veteran, who suffered from cancer of the tongue after smoking twenty cigars a day for twenty years, has undergone a second operation, by which the entire tongue has been removed. In a letter to Bob Hilliard, Maguire recently wrote:

"I shall be a cheap man to ask out for luncheon or dinner, as my diet will consist of milk alone. It's milk now. Every time I turn around I dream of milk. Some one will have to buy me a cow."

A fund, of which Mr. Hilliard is treasurer, is being raised for the benefit of the now speechless Maguire.

DUEL MAY HAVE CAUSED TRAGEDY

the head, but his hair would probably be singed from the proximity of the pistol. Brown's hair was not singed in the least.

Violent at Times.

When put through a severe cross-examination by Captain Dugan, of Police Headquarters, Wilson said:

"About twenty years ago I had scarlet fever, and it left me weak. I have been told by a doctor that I had an abscess in my head and that if it ever broke I would die.

"Since I had scarlet fever I have been subject to epileptic fits. When I am seized with them I never know what has occurred. I forget everything that has transpired.

"WHEN I HAD THESE FITS MY MOTHER WAS OBLIGED TO LOCK ME IN A ROOM, BECAUSE I ALWAYS BECAME VIOLENT. SHE WAS AFRAID OF ME WHEN I WAS IN THAT STATE, AND MY STEPFATHER ALSO WAS AFRAID TO TRUST ME."

There was no possible motive for Brown to commit the crime, as all who know him say he was exemplary in his conduct.

Wilson Bought Revolver.

The police attach considerable importance to Wilson's admission that he purchased the revolver with which the crime was committed, and that his stepfather took the weapon away from him as soon as he learned he had it.

Suspicion against Wilson was not strong until he admitted that he himself had bought the weapon last Thursday to protect himself against burglars.

At station, Jan. 15, after his arrest, he recited to Captain McGrath and Captain Dugan the details of the tragedy. He told substantially the story he first gave out Saturday afternoon, but his narration was given in such a rambling manner that nothing immediately centered on him.

Accompanied by the police, Wilson was taken to the home at No. 15 Birch street. There he went through a rehearsal of the tragedy, pointing out where his mother had been sitting and how his father bent over her when he fired. If Wilson tells the truth, the police say, he must have seen his father sitting at the table, because the position in which he was lying on the couch was such that he was directly facing the room in which the two were seated.

"My father took the revolver away from me when he saw it," Wilson said, "and the next time I saw it was when it was in his hand on Saturday afternoon. When I got home my mother and stepfather were fighting. I was lying down on a couch, but on account of the loud talk I could not sleep. Then I lighted a cigarette, and I heard a shot ring out. I rushed into the room where they were, and there I saw Lot my mother had been shot. My stepfather overturned the revolver on me and fired, but I got out before he had a chance to kill me. After that he shot himself."

When asked how many shots were fired all together, Wilson replied:

"Two or three."

When the revolver was found there were five chambers empty. Two bullets were found in the woman's body, one in Brown and another on the floor. No trace of the fifth has been found.

Wilson said he was trying to reach a door leading to the stairway when Brown fired, but a search by the police has failed to reveal any trace of the bullet.

Wilson takes his arrest coolly, and today he sat in his cell in station 13, apparently unconcerned. At no time has he shown great grief.

DUMPS TON OF COIN ON MEN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 29.—A ton of gold and silver coin was dumped into the subway on Park Row shortly before 9 o'clock this morning, as the heads of Italian laborers below by the overturning of an American Express Company's wagon carrying five strong boxes. That the armed detectives on the rear of the wagon, as well as the men in the excavation, all escaped serious injury is considered miraculous. Only the narrowness of the opening prevented a loss of life, for the wagon, though it almost disappeared from view, did not fall to the bottom of the hole where the men were working.

COLONEL TO BE KAISER'S GUEST

NEWPORT, March 29.—Charles F. Robinson, who is to be elected colonel of the Newport Artillery Company, has had an order placed for the immediate delivery of his uniform, as he will attend, at the invitation of Emperor William, the autumn manoeuvres of the German army.

This invitation Mr. Robinson received some time before he was proposed as the colonel of the Newport Artillery Company, and now that he will be an officer of the militia he will attend the manoeuvres in the uniform of a colonel.

Mr. Robinson will also represent Mr. Plant on the schooner Ingomar in her races in European waters.

MILES FEARS DANGER AHEAD

General Says Our Government Must be Based on Patriotism.

NOT UPON GREAT ARMIES

WASHINGTON, March 29.—In a letter written to the Grand Rapids Democratic Club, Lieutenant-General Nelson A. Miles declares that the impending election will be one of the gravest in the history of the country and will determine whether the United States shall have a pure democracy or a despotism.

General Miles says that the country is menaced by serious evils and that its welfare will depend upon the intelligence and patriotism of the sovereign voters; that the perpetuity of our democratic government depends, not upon the presence of great armies, the will of a despot or the dictation of any ruler, but entirely upon the patriotism of our citizens. The leaders or participants in acts that only result in conquest, devastation, pillage and spoliation are not patriots."

HOW THOMAS W. LAWSON LOOKED ON THE WITNESS STAND

SKETCHED IN COURT BY ARTIST RALEIGH OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN STAFF.

Always a picturesque and interesting witness, whether the case be one of copper, gas, or what not, Thomas W. Lawson has out-Lawsonized himself during the two days that he has been on the stand in the gas hearing at the Supreme Court.

But the greatest sensation of all the sensations which he has caused in court was that created when he said: "In the nine years during which Mr. Rogers and I were connected, I did business for him to the amount of $100,000,000. One single transaction netted a profit of $46,000,000."

And who but a Lawson could have added: "For all this business there were never any written accounts to show."

LAWSON ASKED ROGERS FOR $1,000,000

between $500,000 and $600,000; profits nothing.

"Two plans:

First one: Million dollars to me.

Second: One and one-half million to both of us, that is seven hundred and fifty to each, but you to allow me the one and one-half million in something which I am now ready for and which I will guarantee you against loss to the extent of my $750,000, and which I believe will double the one and one-half million in ninety days."

TO HAVE TEN PER CENT.

You later called me up and asked me if I would allow you to arrange the details, keeping in mind what I had said was the general situation, as by the above telephone, and later in the afternoon you called me up and said that Mr. Winsor, for Kidder, Peabody & Co., had agreed that I should have ten per cent. of any and all profits connected with the entire transaction, and that in your opinion that was as good as or a better offer than either one I had made. I then said: "If you think this is so, I will agree to it," which I did there and then.

Later, when I saw you, you repeated to me the trade you had made, and many times thereafter you have repeated it. There has never been any mention made in any way, shape, form or manner of any interest in the New England Gas & Coke, and I have never had any idea, nor have I now, of what this means.

Later I received of you $85,000 and have never since this matter was mentioned how any other money transactions with you of this nature, and you have repeatedly in conversation with me since this trade was made stated that my 10 per cent. could not amount to less than a number of hundreds of thousands of dollars. Repeatedly you have said to me I should be surprised at the largeness of my profit, and everything that you have ever said to me on the subject has been of a nature to lead me to think that my interest was up to the offer I had made.

HAD NO MEETING.

Some time ago you said to me, "Lawson, I have been thinking over the great responsibility I am under in holding your interest in the Massachusetts Gas affair, and you haven't anything in writing to show for it, and as it is such an important matter to you and so much money is involved in it, that I have, after thinking it over, had a paper drawn up, which Winsor and myself have signed, and I have then had this paper placed in an envelope and put in the safe, and have instructed Miss Harrison, in case anything should happen to me, to deliver to you."

Now if there is anything more that you can think of that I can do to protect this large interest of yours, I will do it, provided, of course, it is something that will not show anyone that I have any interest in the matter."

Again, in the middle of last December you called me on the telephone and said to me, "Lawson, I want to repeat what I have said so many times before, your interest in Massachusetts Gas is piling up until it is now so large that even you will be astounded at its size, and I want to warn you, don't do anything to jeopardize it."

I said, "What do you mean by that?" You said, "Nothing more than you might do things in the market that would hurt the stock; in fact, some of its friends have complained to me the last day or two that you were issuing against letters that might adversely affect it, because every point, you know, added to the price of Massachusetts Gas stock is a great many dollars additional profit to you." And I said, "All right, I will try and do nothing to injure the price." The absurdity of talking New England Gas and Coke, or $5,250, is so great that I can not keep rational in reciting the facts.

MIXED AND JUMBLED.

I have instructed Mr. Albers to say this one word to you: I have not the slightest idea what Mr. Beck and Mr. Hemenway were talking about, and I cannot believe that you have sent me any such message, but that these gentlemen have got some talk of yours so mixed and jumbled up that it is absolutely meaningless to me. There is no New England Gas & Coke, and it was killed long before this agreement went in force, and Kidder, Peabody never did have anything to do with it so far as I know. Believe me, yours very truly. THOMAS W. LAWSON.

WITNESS PHILLIPS DOES NOT APPEAR.

In the testimony to-day, Mr. Whipple tried to show that James Phillips, Jr., formerly an official of the American Woolen Company, and at one time a follower of Henry H. Rogers in gas matters, left Boston Sunday rather than appear in the Supreme Court in connection with the present gas suit.

Edward M. Fowle, key clerk at the Touraine, testified that he saw the summons in Mr. Phillips's box Saturday afternoon, but that the envelope was gone Saturday evening.

Claude M. Hart, one of the proprietors of the Touraine, testified that he believed he saw Mr. Phillips in the hotel lobby on Sunday, and that he gave up his room about 10:30 Sunday morning. He was notified that Mr. Phillips had gone South.

SHE IGNORES $6,000 LEGACY TO TRAMP

Heiress to Save Boy Flees from Poorhouse on Hearing Of Good Luck.

FEARS HE'LL BE KIDNAPPED.

LOWELL, March 29.—Astounded by the report that Ella Simmons, who was detained with her little son, Vernon, at the Alderman Old Ladies' poorfarm, had disappeared after being told that she was the heir to $6,000 bequeathed to her by an uncle named Darnell, pronounced by those who knew her before her life was darkened and she became a tramp, believe that she may never come to claim the bequest.

Her child is dusky skinned and was born shortly after she made the acquaintance of an Indian who performed with a small circus.

"She became a tramp through fear of her husband," said one who knew her, "she was an inmate a while of an insane asylum, and although released as cured, was always highly nervous afterward. She may fear that if the man hears of her good fortune he will come back and claim the child. Her love for the little fellow is so strong that separation from him would take from her life its only gleam of sunshine.

To prevent the man she dreads from tracking her, she is said to have often changed her name, and she would not reveal her identity to the Baldwin authorities until they threatened to permanently retain her. When spring came, she heard the call of the wild and longed to again trudge the highways with her child by her side. Mother love, the instinct of a normal and fear of a man all combine to keep upon her the curse of a wandering foot.

There is $6,000 awaiting her in the Lowell bank, and to claim it she must call upon Lawyer James J. Keyes, of Barristers Hall. He may have taken the case further advised by the BOSTON AMERICAN, for he cannot be found. He had spent considerable money to locate her when it was learned that she was in Baltimore. The estate of her deceased uncle has been settled, and all the heirs have received their legacies except Ella.

Their uncle left an estate on Branch street, in a fashionable section of this city, which adjoins the handsome property of James W. Benton. It was valued at $25,000. The woman fell heir to one-fifth of it. She has an uncle named James S. G. Sweatt in Medford. He said to-day that he had not seen Ella Simmons for twenty-five years, and took no interest in her.

"SPHINX OF WALL ST." WANTED HERE

Is a Woman and Most Wonderful in Financial World—Gets $10,000 a Year to Keep Secrets.

K. I. Harrison, who is very much wanted by Thos. W. Lawson as a witness in the Boston gas legislation, is known as the "Sphinx of Wall Street," and the "Cerebus of the Standard Oil." These titles have been fairly earned in fifteen years of service as private secretary to H. H. Rogers, the oil and copper magnate and right-hand man of John D. Rockefeller.

K. I. Harrison is a woman, the most wonderful woman of the Wall Street district.

Edward M. Fowle, key clerk at the Touraine, testified that he saw the summons in Mr. Phillips's box Saturday afternoon, but that the envelope was gone Saturday evening.

Claude M. Hart, one of the proprietors of the Touraine, testified that he believed he saw Mr. Phillips in the hotel lobby on Sunday, and that he gave up his room about 10:30 Sunday morning. He was notified that Mr. Phillips had gone South.

SOME FACTS ABOUT K. I. HARRISON

Most wonderful woman in world of finance.

Known as "Cerberus of the Standard Oil."

Often called the "Sphinx of Wall street."

Gets $10,000 a year for keeping Oil Magnate H. H. Roger's secrets, and for sending away persons he doesn't wish to see.

Keeps house in a fine brownstone front.

Has never been guilty of an indiscretion in talking of Millionaire Rogers's affairs.

K. I. Harrison is a woman, the most wonderful woman of the Wall Street district.

K. I. Harrison gets $10,000 a year, which enables her to live in a handsome brownstone residence at No. 1254 Dean street, Brooklyn, for keeping herself out of sight and holding her tongue and keeping other people from going in to see H. H. Rogers.

In the fifteen years she has held this position she has established a record of never having committed a single indiscretion of the tongue and of never having permitted to pass into Mr. Rogers's office a single individual whom Mr. Rogers did not want to see.

When Lawyer Whipple suggested to Mr. Rogers, who was a witness, that it might be a good idea to call Miss Harrison to give her testimony regarding the $11,000,000 gas deal, Mr. Rogers said:

"I don't think she could be prevailed upon to come, even if I ask her."

A New York reporter tried to see Miss Harrison at the offices of the Standard Oil Co. at No. 26 Broadway. Miss Harrison was "very much engaged; could not possibly see any one, and would the visitor telephone."

The visitor retired to the nearest pay station and telephoned.

Miss Harrison was still very much engaged; could not possibly be called to the telephone, and would the caller write.

The caller retired to the nearest pay station and wrote a note. It was shortly returned by a messenger with the message that Miss Harrison was not in. A neat, typewritten letter was sent to Miss Harrison through the mail. Its fate was never learned, but there was no answer. A registered letter was returned by the postoffice.

A cab carried a reporter in Sunday best to 1,254 Dean street, Brooklyn. A smart maid at the door of a handsome house was not certain whether Miss Harrison was in. She would take in a card. From the scantily furnished drawing room into which the visitor was ushered, a rustle of silken skirts and a whispered conference in the next room could be heard. A tall, gaunt, austere, but rather handsome woman of about 40 passed with swift though dignified step across the aperture formed by the folding doors and vanished quickly up a stairway. The maid returned the card.

"Miss Harrison was very sorry, but she was much engaged and could not see callers."

UNION PACIFIC GAINS A POINT

NEW YORK, March 29.—The stock market this morning was somewhat apathetic and extremely narrow and professional. Prices were somewhat feeble at the start and fluctuated up and down, within contracted limits, but with some degree of unsteadiness. The final tendency at the close of the first hour, however, pointed toward improvement. Union Pacific was well supported in all the small concessions and finally gained over a point.

Delaware and Hudson advanced 1½, but later lost ¾. Changes elsewhere were without significance. Steel preferred was inclined to heaviness on continued pessimistic talk regarding dividend prospects. Trading appeared to be drifting and at present prices are inclined to drop with the exception of Union Pacific. Government bonds unchanged.

STAMFORD, Conn., March 29.—William C. Bowler, of Roxbury, crazed by religious zeal, has attempted to convert Daniel Donovan, a nonsogearian, to Christianity by violence.

Arising from his bed Bowler dressed and went up to Donovan's room.

"Get up, Dan," he cried, shaking the old man. "Get up, I say, and do penance for your sins while the hour is left for repentance. I am Christ, sent to save you, wicked creature that thou art. If you will repent and live as I do, there will be no death for you Daniel. I have sorrow for your life everlasting. Behold in me a man who never shall die."

SOFIA, March 29.—M. Boris Sarafoff, the Macedonian leader, today said that the Macedonians have decided not to raise a rebellion this spring. They will delay the uprising, he said, in order to give the Powers time to carry out their proposed reforms, and also to prove to the world that the Macedonians were willing to allow such reforms to be instituted.

He expressed a conviction, however, that the Powers would soon be convinced that Turkey would not tolerate any reforms, as the Turks will never tolerate a Galour as an equa'

MUSICAL TIFF STIRS LONDON

LONDON, March 29.—There is a heated discussion going on at present between Henry Wood, England's greatest musical director, and Mr. Boosey. The war of words has reached such an acute stage that Mr. Wood will probably accept the offer made him by the city of Pittsburg, U. S. A., instead of his still more recent one made to him by the musical authorities in Moscow.

The cause of the dispute is the introduction of a number of foreigners into his orchestra. Mr. Boosey, who owns the Queen's Hall, protests the replacing of Englishmen by Continental artists, for it was one of his boasts that the Queen's Hall Orchestra was thoroughly British, and he has always encouraged native talent.

MISHAP MARS SECLUSION

LONDON, March 29.—The Duchess of Bedford has, according to the London papers, just returned to London from the Continent, where she has been spending a week or ten days.

As a matter of fact, the Duchess has been spending her time at Woburn Abbey, her Continental visits scarcely ever lasting further away than the fine old Hedfordshire estate. The Duke and Duchess are perfectly happy in absolute seclusion.

Not even the villagers would have known that her grace was in residence but for the fact that she has been practising driving her own motor car in the park and had a most unlucky accident, for on running a corner rather sharply she ran over a small deer, one of the latest imported and most valuable specimens in the Duke's extensive park.

The Duchess was not hurt, but the animal was killed outright and the duke is now looking for another specimen of the same breed.

Mr. Manley has long been a factor in the politics of his State.

BROTHER AGAIN ON RACK, HIS EVIDENCE UNSHAKEN

Harris Dexter Sticks to Story of Parker's Murder He First Told the Police.

Officers Now Search for New Revolver as Strongest Clue to the Assassin.

Put on the rack again in his Randolph home to-day by the State police in their quest for the murderer of Parker Dexter, his brother Harris stood the ordeal with absolute calmness. Folding his arms, he answered every question frankly and without a tremor. He told the same story for the third time. Searching questions did not elicit any variation of importance. At the close of the examination, the State detectives had learned nothing that lifted the veil of mystery.

Dr. Chase said that when Harris telephoned him after the murder, the boy's voice showed no sign of agitation. The fortitude of the only witness to the crime is astounding to the authorities as any feature of the strange tragedy.

State detectives handling the cases are now search for another revolver, as the strongest clew to the murder.

Bullet in Two Pieces.

The autopsy was performed in this city by Medical Examiner Draper, assisted by Medical Examiner Jones of Norfolk County, Dr. Chase of Randolph and Drs French and Chase of the Homeopathic Hospital. The bullet was found in two pieces and together they weighed 62½ grains. It had not taken a downward course, as if fired from a height higher than the boy's head, which would have been the case if the murderer was taller than his victim, but had gone through the boy's skull in a straight and almost level course.

When the police learned that the autopsy upon the body of Dexter had revealed the fact that the bullet had split after entering the unfortunate lad's skull one of the strongest hopes for obtaining a tangible clue vanished.

They had hoped that the caliber of the bullet would lead to the discovery, first, of the revolver, and next to the person who fired the fatal shot.

Now the police have decided that the pistol found in the Dexter home is not the weapon with which the boy was slain and they search for another.

When District Attorney Asa F. Frech was asked what would be done to corroborate or disprove the story told by Harris, he replied:

District Attorney Talks.

"The truth may be developed when the boy is taken into court. There are several minute details which we are working out. I will not discuss them now, for we do not want the boy to know everything that we are doing. As yet the police have not had the chance to subject Harris to the thorough cross-examination that they have in mind. When he retold his story he did not change it in important essentials, but he enlarged it by putting in more detail. So far what he has said has not varied as to the main facts.

"Everything that the boy has said has been carefully considered and weighed by the police.

"The police have not learned that the boys had quarrelled, or that either was given to violent temper. But, both, according to Dr. A. L. Chase, the Dexter family physician, are of nervous temperament. Harris has not shown such a characteristic since the murder. His conduct has been more significant of a phlegmatic disposition.

Dr. Chase and the medical examiner reached the Dexter home more than an hour after the mysterious tragedy, and the former picked up the revolver carried by Edward J. T. Dexter, the father of the boys. It has been suggested Parker was killed with this pistol. But Dr. Chase said, after examining the revolver thoroughly and passing it to his associates:

"That gun has not been used recently. Neither has it been cleaned."

Bore No Powder Marks.

It bore no powder marks and did not smell as if recently discharged. This and other circumstances lead the police to believe that the boy must have been killed with another revolver, and they began an exhaustive search through stores in Brairtree, where Harris attends the Thayer Academy, to learn if a revolver had been bought there recently.

Two measurements have been made to test the story of Harris Dexter. Parker, according to Harris, was sitting in a chair fifteen feet from the door by which Harris said the strange man entered. In order to take the course Harris says he did, Parker went through four doors, opening them wholly or in part, to the stairs leading to the bathroom floor, a distance of twenty-seven feet.

Harris had about half the distance to go, as he tells his own flight, yet, according to his story, he was behind Parker in the way upstairs. All the time Harris was hearing the struggle who made no effort to shoot him, but kept after Parker.

Harris went to his own room, locked the door against the door, while Parker fled to the bathroom, and finished his murderer, who neglected the older boy.

No Sign of Stranger a' Visit.

Dr. Chase said that when he arrived at the house there was not the slightest sign that showed the visit of any stranger. The two fishermen seen by several people have been accounted for.

Harris was asked to give his own explanation as to why anyone should want to shoot his brother. He frankly admitted that he could not do so.

SULLY ASSETS OVER A MILLION

NEW YORK, March 29.—After a conference of some of the large creditors of D. J. Sully & Co. with the receivers and counsel for Mr. Sully, it was stated the firm's books showed assets of $1,100,000, with a possibility of more.

John R. Dos Passos, counsel for Mr. Sully, gave out a statement in which he said:

"Counsel for Mr. Sully appeared before the committee of creditors and stated, in behalf of Mr. Sully, that the latter desired to have his affairs arranged and adjusted immediately, and authorized a proposition to the creditors of 40 cents on the dollar cash, payable within 20 days, and the balance in notes, without interest, payable in one, two and three years.

"If the creditors agree to Mr. Sully's proposition, he will be enabled to resume business soon."

PRIEST SAYS PACT WILL BIND

BROCKTON, March 29.—Gen. Samuel Beck of Boston and Edith G. Stevens of New Bedford petitioned for suspension of the decree appointing the Rev. William E. Kelley of Bridgewater guardian of the child Ethel Stevens.

One of the parents of the child was Protestant and the other of the Catholic faith, both being now dead, and they were married at the Catholic church, after agreeing that their children should be brought up in that faith.

"The Probate Court does not sit here to determine what church organization shall have supremacy," said Judge Harris. "I thank the Lord that, as judge of probate, I am not obliged to recognize any agreement of that kind."

Father Kelley arose from his chair, and, with his arm extended, replied: "Well, your honor, the time will come, mark my words, when these agreements will be recognized by the courts."

PACY'S HOUR OF FREEDOM UNCERTAIN

Release of Lynn Murder Suspect Before Friday Depends on Peters.

McDONALD WOMAN HELD

Although exonerated by the story told by Bessie McDonald concerning the fatal shooting of John J. Tucker in Lynn, David H. V. Pacy, the Westminster Chambers clerk, is still in jail in that city and the hour of his release is uncertain.

"As to the release of Pacy before Friday, I cannot say," said Judge Berry to an AMERICAN reporter. "I have endeavored to get into touch with District Attorney Peters, and what he says will probably determine whether or not Pacy will be set at liberty.

"Miss Lea is a most important witness," the Judge added, when speaking about the McDonald woman. He had just held her in $500 for her appearance on Friday.

Pacy's homicide counsel will be asked for, and his friends believe that he will not be held in durance longer than to-morrow at the latest. His eyes filled with tears, as he put his head in his hands, when told the favorable turn in his case.

Pacy Bears No Ill Will.

"Being absolutely innocent," he said, "I had no fear of the result. But it is a great hardship to be imprisoned and pelted with lagging when you have done nothing wrong. But I want to say that I bear no ill will toward those who have placed me in this predicament."

Bessie McDonald is reported to have said that "Chicken" Sullivan, known as the "Red Man" in Norfolk, and Tucker, but she is a blonde and twenty-six years old. Sullivan is a Negro. Police have been looking for her since the night of the tragedy.

Well Known in Lynn.

The woman, who is well known in Lynn, is said to have been one of the many admirers of George Dart, one of the victims of Peggmeen, now in the Salem jail awaiting trial for numerous crimes, and also of the fascinating the East Boston safe-blowing job.

She admits, the police say, that she was with the much-wanted trio on the night of the crime, and that she was in the company of one of them until the next morning. She told just as little as she could, and would not admit that her companion made any reference to the shooting.

She came to Boston on the day following the crime, and since then, she says, has had no knowledge of the whereabouts of any of the three. The police, however, believe she is holding something back.

The names of the three men now wanted are John Sullivan, alias "Chicken," alias John Casey; John L. Sullivan, alias "Little John L.," and John Gilmartin. This is the trio alleged to have run Lynn last Wednesday night to suit themselves and at the revolver's point.

HANNA'S MANTLE FALL ON TWO MEN.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Members of the sub-committee on convention arrangements are considering the advisability of a division of the labors that fell exclusively upon the shoulders of the late Senator Hanna, as chairmans of the Republican National Committee, as it is believed the duties are too arduous for any one individual. Among the plans for this purpose are, that the chairman of the National Committee shall have general supervision over headquarters and general work, with two vice-chairmen in direct charge of New York and Chicago respectively. The eastern and western chairmen are each to have supreme power in his own territory, the national officers to have the ordering of financial matters.

Congressman Collins of Omaha is the only person so far mentioned for the national chairmanship.

TOOK FATHERLY INTEREST

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, March 29.—George Buck, a chartered public accountant, whom Coroner Goldenkrans has been anxious to interview because of the mysterious death of Miss Charlotte Tucker, the beautiful Boston girl, was brought to the Coroner's office to-day by Detectives Brunes and McCormick. They had located him, after a search of several days, at his home in the Bronx. Buck is distinguished in appearance, is about 40 years old, and is married and the father of two children. In an informal statement to the Coroner he said he had met Miss Tucker at luncheon one day and after that time had taken a fatherly interest in her. He said he knew nothing of the manner of her death.

YOUR LAST CHANCE TO SEE DR. KOCH

The Great Consumption and Asthma Specialist

Dr. Edward Koch, the inventor of the Koch Inhalation, who is now in this city at the Koch Lung Cure, No. 761 Boylston street, will leave Boston shortly. The doctor asserts that bronchitis, catarrh of the lungs is often mistaken for consumption. He says:

"Nothing but a direct application of medicine to the diseased parts of the lungs and germicides to the very seat of the disease will effect a cure of any lung disease. Consumptives cannot be cured by medicine applied only by inhaling them in a vaporized state. The lungs constitute an air cavity and can be reached medicinally only by medicated air. This treatment was discovered, perfected and first successfully applied by me. It is the only natural, scientific and common sense treatment ever applied for bronchial and consumptive diseases. If it fails, nothing else could possibly succeed. But it never does fail, unless mortal injury to the lung structures has taken place before it is applied.

"I will positively assert that Bronchial or Catarrhal Consumption can be cured by my healing, oily vapors that reach the seat of the disease, laden as they are with the Koch germ-killing Tuberculine; it can be used at your own home. Do not fill the stomach full of medicines which do more harm than good.

"After a personal observation, and examining the sputum of eleven hundred cases, I am convinced that fully three-fifths of all deaths charged to consumption are really catarrhal bronchitis associated with dyspepsia, which is brought on from severe dosing.

"While I am in Boston I shall be pleased to examine the sputum and consult with any patient free who will call upon me at my office, No. 761 Boylston street."

FRIENDS OF ILL-PAID WORKERS CONSIDER NEXT STEP.

SEND THIS TO YOUR CONGRESSMAN:

Mr.....

House of Representatives, Washington, D. C.

I believe that the letter carriers are entitled to the increase of pay that they so earnestly desire. Their faithfulness, integrity and energy in transacting the business of the people should certainly be recognized and rewarded, considering the fact that they are ill paid now. They suffer much from exposure, are docked when they miss a day's work; and there are no pensions for them.

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Friends of gladly vote with Messrs. Livernash and the letter carriers in Congress are keeping up the fight for decent pay for this deserving class of public servant. Republican representatives are becoming seriously embarrassed by the receipt of daily requests from constituents upon coupons clipped from one or other of the Hearst papers, requesting their support of a remedial measure. An attempt will be made to introduce some measure this session, but it will be necessary to overcome the hostility of the administration, which is able to put pressure upon its supporters in the House, many of whom, if left free, would Hearst and their Democratic allies, for they realize that retribution is in store for their violated pledges.

The case of the letter carriers is admitted to be perfect. These men's salaries were fixed thirty years ago, and even then they were considered inadequate. With enormously increased cost of living in the interval the men now find themselves literally unable to meet their expenses. Many have given their best years to the public service, and are too old to change. They see the time approach when they shall no longer be able to stand the hardships of their calling, and with no money put away and no pension to rely on the outlook is dark, indeed.

RAILROADS BURTON'S RUIN

By Boston American Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Corrupt railroads and their methods are the cause of the downfall of Senator Joseph R. Burton, is the opinion of William Allen White, author of "What's the Matter With Kansas." Mr. White in a published article to-day says:

The conviction of United States Senator John R. Burton, of a felony in connection with his official conduct will surprise no one in Kansas.

For a dozen years before he went to Washington he was a professional candidate for Senatorial honors. In the State Legislature he openly solicited bribes and was charged dozens of times in the newspapers of the State with being a boodler without the slightest resentment upon his part.

His election was due to the influence of the railroads. Every local attorney for the Rock Island, the Missouri Pacific, the Santa Fe and the Union Pacific, who had influence was working for Burton.

Peremptory orders came out of Chicago and St. Louis that local Kansas railroad lawyers support Burton or lose their places. The railroad campaign for Burton was not defensive, but offensive. It was a war of conquest.

His has been a political career by furnishing a horrible example to young men who would go into politics as a means of profit.

The state designed by Mrs. John M. Holcombe, member of the Connecticut Commission, will have appended an acorn patterned after one from the Charter Oak, instead of a wooden nutmeg.

SAVINGS BANK TO LIQUIDATE

By Boston American Leased Wire.

WESTERLY, R. I., March 29.—Taking advantage of provision allowing it sixty days before paying deposits, the Pawcatuck Savings Bank, which has deposits aggregating $95,000, notified depositors to-day that they cannot withdraw their funds without formal notice. The bank proposes to liquidate and will be able, it is said, to pay depositors in full. Two other savings banks are in liquidation.

WORLD'S FAIR KEEPS PEOPLE THIS SIDE

NEW YORK, March 29.—Agents of all large steamship lines declared to-day that for six months past and for the following month or two transatlantic travel been so light that they attribute the light bookings to the fact that the World's Fair at St. Louis may have something to do with it.

DEMS. TRY TO TALK ALL DAY

PROVIDENCE, R. I., March 29.—The Democratic minority in the House of Representatives organized to-day this afternoon and they inaugurated last Friday to prolong the present session of the General Assembly long enough to prevent the Republicans from holding a post election session at which legislation inimical to the people may be enacted, as has been the rule heretofore.

The Republicans were out in force and sought to apply cloture at every opportunity, while the Democrats made speeches and demanded a roll call which occupied five minutes on every proposition. Several of the best talkers were prepared to hold the floor all day and had primed themselves with speeches dealing generally with all the labor and other measures which the Republicans have put into the hands of partisan committees and refused to report back.

ST. LOUIS COLDS KILL FILIPINOS

ST. LOUIS, March 29.—The colony of Filipino tribesmen at the World's Fair is smaller by two men than when it arrived last Friday. One of Mandyuyans from the Island of Mindoro, of whom there are but six here, and one of the Bontoc Negritos succumbed yesterday to pneumonia, brought on by exposure.

Both were young men, one being twenty-two and the other twenty-five. Several of the band are suffering from incipient pneumonia.

TWO MINERS KILLED.

CALUMET, Mich., March 29.—Salli Lanta and August Keskitalo, miners, employed in the Quincy mine, were killed this morning. Keskitalo was hit by a large piece of falling rock and Lanta fell 150 feet down a shaft.

PROTEGE OF LIPTON SUES FOR DIVORCE

Reata Winfield, Violiniste, Wants Release from Lionel Laurence.

NAMES LILLIAN BOND

(By Boston American Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, March 29.—The latest sensational climax in the marital episodes of Lionel E. Laurence is furnished to-day in a suit for divorce brought by Reata Winfield, the violin artist and protege of Sir Thomas Lipton, who is Mr Laurence's fifth and last wife. The summons and complaint have just been served on Laurence.

To secure the necessary evidence, Mrs. Laurence, who has been separated from her husband, entered his room in the dead of night, broke open his trunk and secured a mass of documentary evidence in the shape of letters to her husband from various women, particularly Miss Lillian Bond, whose appearance in "San Toy," the Floradora Sextet, "Hearts Aflame" and "Echoes in Kaffirland" did much to make those productions popular.

Plenty of Varied Emotion.

Miss Bond's letters to Mr. Laurence run through the gamut of the emotions, a dawning affection, deepest love, pluse, despondency and suicidal despair. All these are portrayed in impassioned phrases. Mrs. Laurence names Miss Bond as the rival in the suit.

The following letter from Miss Bond to Mr. Laurence seems to mark the beginning of their close acquaintance:

Thursday, Dec. 19, 1901.

Dear Mr. Laurence—

Am too ill to attend rehearsal and beg to be excused. Hoping it will not cause you any annoyance, I remain, faithfully, 161 West Forty-sixth street.

Then this later epistle:

My Dear Larry:—

This will introduce to you my attorney, whom you have not met. He has all my bills. I cannot think of all of them, tell by item. I am, as ever, Miss Bonds.

Here Comes Sorrow.

Here trouble appears:

San Francisco, July 12, 1902.

Dear Mr. Laurence:

Your telegram received, and I hope by the time you receive this I will have received a letter of forgiveness. You have in every way tried to lower me, but, Larry, you have probably never met a little woman that loved you until we met. But my heart in turn to pieces, I am so unhappy. Oh! This world has been so cruel to me! I feel at times if I could only end it all.

You turn on me and sit down with a lot of women and run down a little woman, who has tried to get to the top. All I can say, Larry, is that I here with dead silence because my heart is broken.

(Signed) LILLIAN.

P. S.—(Saturday evening, 11:45 P. M.)—Larry, I can't do any more than drown my sorrow. Oh, my heart, may all the Gods in the Heaven keep you. Good-night, good-bye. (Signed) L.

Imploring him not to drink, Lillian writes to Mr. Laurence from Long Branch, as follows:

My Dear Baby—Be a good boy and please don't drink whisky; it worries me very much. You may not feel it now, but later. Be a good baby. With love and kisses to my darling, I am yours always,

LILLIAN.

In a series of three letters written from Cincinnati, the writer tells of her deep love and says she is his third and only legal wife. One letter, dated May 15, 1900, reads:

My Darling Liney—How glad I was to get your letter! Liney, I love you, darling. My heart, my soul are all for you. I live for you. I meet other men, but there is something repulsive about them.

Oh, dearie, some girl in the company heard I was Mrs. L——. She said: "This is the girl who married Laurence in the Reinhekeiler when drunk, and is suing him for divorce."

When I was told of it I said: "No, I am the one and only one legally his wife. I am not suing, and never will."

Which wife are you?" asked the girl.

I said: "The third, and he is my third, so it's horse and horse."

She didn't say anything more, only laughed, and began paying me compliments. Your only, Lillian.

PROTEST BY MOTHER JONES

(By Boston American Leased Wire.)

DENVER, March 29.—"Mother" Jones, who was deported by the military from Trinidad, has gone to Crested Butte to work among the miners of Gunnison County, where martial law has not been established. She has telegraphed to President Mitchell, of the United Mine Workers, asking him to take the case before President Roosevelt. Here is her own story of her experience:

By MOTHER JONES.

Sheriff Clark came to me, saying that he understood the miners were going to march on some of the mining camps, and that I was going with them. I told the sheriff there was no truth in the statement. I said we had fully demonstrated our ability to control the situation; that two of my colleagues had been brutally beaten by his deputies on the public highway, and another one on a passenger train; that his deputies had killed in cold blood two of our men and wounded two more.

They had beaten men and women and driven them out of their homes in the dead of night. Yet on the part of the striking miners everything was as quiet and orderly as a church. Then the military came and put the county under martial law and instituted a house-to-house search for arms.

I and two of my co-workers were taken under military arrest by the officer in command. This Nero asked me how long I had been in the State, what was my occupation, whether I was a coal digger. He then told me that if there was anything I wanted to go and get it, for I had just five minutes left before I would be led back to the trails and sent to La Junta. Under a military guard of six soldiers I was taken to La Junta and left among strangers and without a dollar. In the 5-minutes' rush I had overlooked that important matter. However, I borrowed some money which enabled me to reach Denver, where I have friends.

The Governor of this State doubtless will be consigned to everlasting oblivion. He has made a record too unsavory to be recommended, for he has turned the fair state of Colorado into a modern Siberia.

CZAR'S FAME WILL BE THAT OF A PEACE MAN

Rev. Dr. Amory H. Bradford, of Montclair, N. J., publicly said that the day of universal peace would soon dawn, when he addressed the Congregational Club.

"I believe that the Czar is sincere and will be longer remembered for peace sentiments than for anything else. If the war in the East must go on, I pray that the David in the fight may conquer the Goliath. The influence of the international court of arbitration will yet result in a United States of Europe."

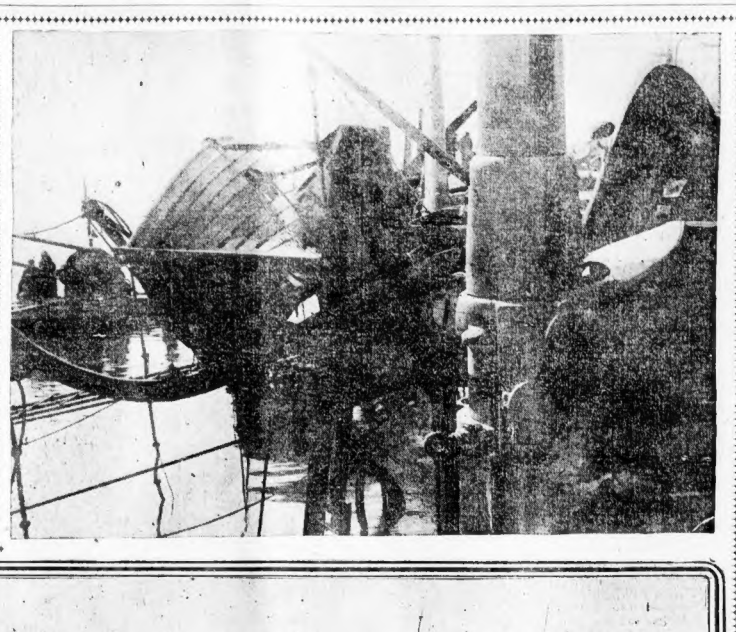
JACK LONDON'S PHOTOGRAPHS FROM THE WAR

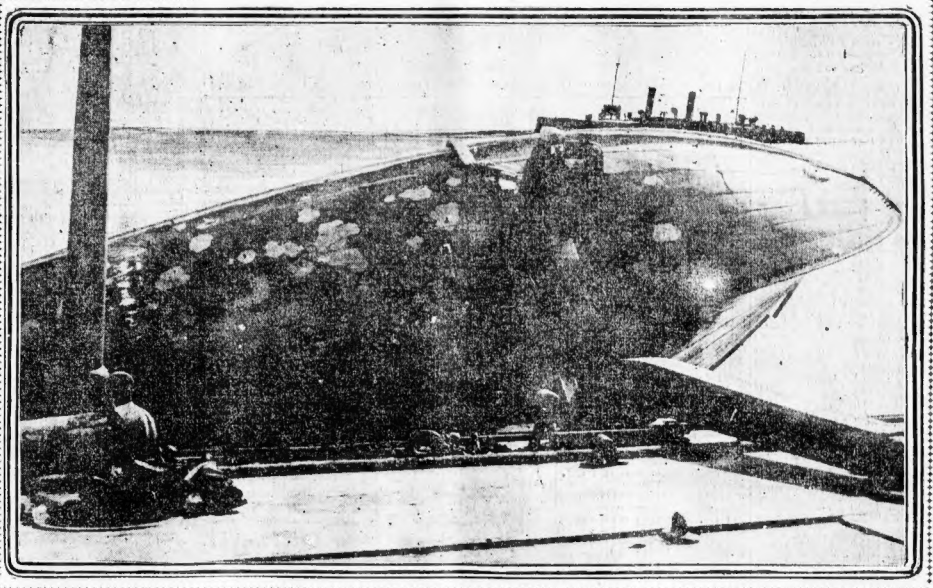
(COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY THE AMERICAN-JOURNAL-EXAMINER.)

HOW THE VARIAG LOOKED AFTER A BATTLE.

Here are the first photographs taken at close range of the Russian cruiser Variag, sunk in battle with the Japanese at Chemulpo, Corea. Jack London, author of the "Call of the Wild," and the most successful novelist of the year, is at the scene of war as the BOSTON AMERICAN'S special correspondent, and immediately after the battle went aboard the Variag. The destruction, he writes, was complete. There was hardly a beam or plate or gun aboard that had not been wrecked or bent or disabled by the Japanese shells. Here is shown a photograph of a portion of the Variag, which lay on her side, her guns—at least those not dismounted—sticking straight up in the air, her boats lying on their sides.

In the second photograph, that of one of her boats, the effects of the fire that raged aboard are shown in the blackened bottom and sides of the craft and the blisters on the paint.





STEDMAN RUSHES TO WIFE'S AID

New York Magistrate Waits for Boston Man in Alleged Drugging Case.

ROBBERY IS ALSO CHARGED

(By Boston American Leased Wire.)

NEW YORK, March 29.—Magistrate Mayo is awaiting the arrival of Leroy Stedman from Boston today before deciding the case of Wm. W. Potts, a theatrical manager, charged by Stedman's wife with having drugged and robbed her of her rings at the Metropolitan Hotel in this city Sunday night.

Potts asserted that he met her in front of the hotel and invited her to have a drink. She consented, and he said they had several dry Martinis. After these came other drinks in profusion, and finally he told the magistrate, the woman said she was hungry and they went to a restaurant, where she had a double portion of lobster salad.

After this, Potts said, the woman went back to the hotel with him and wanted to buy champagne. He refused the offer, he testified, and finally placed her in a cab and sent her home.

Mrs. Stedman told the magistrate that she lived at No. 400 Beacon street. She admitted having had many drinks with Potts, but insisted that she was drugged in the hotel and that the rings were taken from her finger as Potts was putting her into the cab.

LOWELL, Mass., March 29.—Mrs. Madeline Stedman married George Leroy Stedman in Lowell. They have a married son living in Boston. Mrs. John E. Stedman of No. 986 Middlesex street said to the AMERICAN correspondent this noon: "George Stedman is my husband's brother, and h married Madeline Choate in Lowell many years ago. He is a carpenter, living in Everett now.

SANBORN HELD IN $1,500 BAIL

(By Boston American Leased Wire.)

LOWELL, March 29.—When Judge Hadley fixed the bail of Edgar Sanborn at $1,500 in the Police Court this morning there was consternation among the score of deputies and detectives from other cities and States, who were in court.

"He will jump his bail bond and escape us," said one of them.

"I'm not afraid of that," said Deputy Sheriff Redmond. "I have other charges ready if he gives bail, and we will hold him on them."

Sanborn is the man, believed by many to be Issane, who lured a New Jersey officer into Billerica woods to search for hidden booty. He escaped in the darkness and was recaptured after an all night hunt, but not before he was shot and a desperate struggle had taken place.

He is accused of burglary and his friends are now looking for a bondsman. He is now locked up in Lowell jail, although the sheriff at first objected to his being taken there, owing to the recent outbreak of diphtheria in the institution.

Arthur Sanborn, the brother, was held in $500 on the charge of receiving stolen goods. He again gave bail. He took part in the Billerica town meeting yesterday, despite the charges made against him.

CAST HER VOTE; DROPPED DEAD

After going down town in Lynn to cast a vote for her daughter, the leader in a department store voting contest, for a free trip to the world's fair in St. Louis, Mrs. Rosanna Scanlan, forty-four years old, dropped dead in a store. Death was almost instantaneous. Heart disease induced by excitement was the cause.

FIGHTING OVER HENDRICKS BOY

The battle between his parents for the possession of little Tommy Hendricks was resumed in the United States District Court today before many interested spectators. Judge Lowell secured both Dr. charles C. Hendricks, the father, and Wilber Morgrage, counsel for the mother, for their neglect to file briefs today. A continuance was granted until Friday next, when both sides must be ready to argue the case.

Neither the child who is the subject of such bitter litigation nor his mother was in court. The boy is at the House of the Angel Guardian, in Roxbury, where he is to remain until the court renders a decision, and his mother is in this city. Her friends advised her not to go to court today. She fainted in the State court when a writ for habeas corpus was applied for there, and it was feared that her feelings would overcome her if she listened to the proceedings to-day.

Mr. Hendricks also placed the boy in the Roxbury home, was his own lawyer.

When the case was called, Lawyer Morgrage told of divers proceedings begun by Mrs. Hendricks in New York last week, and stated that the custody of the child had been awarded her. The lawyer asked for a continuance so that he might look up the question of jurisdiction.

"When I granted a continuance last week," said Judge Lowell, "it was with the understanding that the time would be used for preparation on that point, and briefs were to be filed to-day. The court has been given no assistance in determining jurisdiction."

Judge Lowell finally granted the continuance.

LOSS OF MONEY DRIVES A COUPLE TO SUICIDE

ST. LOUIS, March 29.—John B. Altman and his wife committed suicide by means of gas through grief that the mortgage on their home was about to be foreclosed. They had once had a fortune of $500,000.

MORAN TILTS WITH JUDGE

GLOUCESTER, March 29.—"You will not fight," said Lawyer John B. Moran of Boston.

"I will not be drawn into a quarrel with a 'mud slinger,' who has been brought here, I understand, for that purpose," said Judge York of this city.

Such was the retort piquant heard in City Hall when the special committee of the Common Council began its investigation of the management of the almshouse.

Mr. Moran had been retained as counsel for Keeper John S. Parsons. Judge York represented the Associated Charities, who charged that the management was corrupt and incompetent.

Mr. Moran had asserted that he would not let his client go on until Wednesday. Then, after the tilt with York, Chairman Longan informed Mr. Moran that he was conducting the investigation, and that the committee proposed to hear Parsons then and there.

Then Judge York proceeded to interrogate Mr. Parsons, with the result that hints of vermin, uncleanliness and disease among the inmates were dropped, besides stories of cruelty, one alleging that a female weighing 200 pounds knocked down and jumped on a seventy-year-old woman.

AMEER IS QUITE WELL.

PESHAWAR, British India, March 29.—The Ameer of Afghanistan, erroneously reported poisoned, is quite well. His brother, in a quarrel with a half-brother, is nursing a severe wound from a revolver shot.

CANTATA SEATS FREE.

The sacred cantata, "Olivet to Calvary," by J. H. Maunder, will be given free at Suswnut Church, Tremont and Brookline streets, on Good Friday evening at 7:45 o'clock.

HUB PULPITS WON'T BURN

"Don't rant in the pulpit, but have some enthusiasm and speak your mind. Many pulpits in Boston are dying of propriety. They are drier than Aaron's rod. They did burn once, but they never do."

This advice to Boston University theological students was given by Dr. P. S. Henson. He criticised present day preaching with much vigor.

"We are told we are living in an age of great culture, and it is believed in this section that we should pretend that we have no feelings. I believe in feeling and expressing feeling. That is why I like Methodists. In politics, people in and around Boston let themselves out, but in matters of religion they speak with bated breath. I do not believe in ranting and tearing in the pulpit, but I do believe in getting rid of religious formalism.

"Pulpit prayers are too long and diffuse and interlarded with quotations from standard poets. If the drowning man who prayed, 'Save me or I perish,' had prayed one of our modern prayers he would have been dead before he got through the first sentence."

BOOKS FOR PRINCETON.

PRINCETON, N. J., March 29.—Among a number of valuable books presented to Princeton University library by former President Cleveland, from his own collection, is a large volume from President Barrios of the republic of Guatemala. Its binding is in white vellum, on which is carried out a design in the national colors of this country.

SAXONIA SAILS.

The steamship Saxonia, Captain W. B. Cresson, sailed this morning at 7 o'clock, with 36 saloon, 60 second and 200 third class passengers on board. The vessel took back four immigrants who were rejected.

PLOT FOUND TO SLAY THE POPE?

Special Cable to Boston American.

LONDON, March 29.—A special despatch to the Chronicle from Rome says:

For two days past the palaces and gardens of the Vatican have been closely guarded by a large force of Italian soldiers and police, especially drafted for the purpose.

Your correspondent tried to solve the mystery, and was assured to-day by a Vatican ecclesiastic that the unwonted guard is due to the discovery of a plot against the Pope's life.

ROME, March 28.—Cardinal Merry Del Val, Papal Secretary of State, denies the report that a plot against the Pope's life has been discovered.

LABOR

ALLIED PRINTING TRADES LABOR COUNCIL BOSTON MASS. 96

ALL THE NEWS FROM EVERYWHERE

Owing to the terrible havoc played this winter by storms with the Atlantic fishing fleet, most of which hails from Gloucester and Boston, the Fishermen's Union has decided to establish a benefit fund for the widows and orphans. As a starter for this fund a grand ball will be given at Paul Revere Hall, Mechanics building, Huntington avenue, on Wednesday, April 13.

More fishermen were lost the past winter than ever before. In a single storm forty-nine members of the union perished at sea, and in every storm many were either drowned or frozen to death.

So great are the risks to lives and limbs of the fishermen that no insurance company, benefit, sick or accident society will give protection to them, except at a premium so high as to preclude their enrolment. Their pay is very meagre, not averaging over $7 a week. The union hopes to be able to give $5 a week to a member in case he is ill and $100 to his relatives in the event of his death. The union has over 3,000 members and there are over 12,000 men employed in the fleet.

FIGHT FOR EIGHT HOURS.

Only very high-class work is done by the members of the Ladies' Tailoring Union who have just won strike at George Bradley's shop, No. 617 Boylston street. It requires many years of experience and, as a rule, residence in Paris, London, Vienna or Berlin to attain their peculiar skill.

There are 300 men in the union, but only eleven were involved in the strike. Ladies' tailoring seasons are very short, each of the four lasting only from six to nine weeks, and therefore giving employment only about seven months of the year on an average.

FOR CITY OWNERSHIP.

Having secured 100,000 signatures to a referendum petition, Chicago labor unions are to join in demonstration in favor of city ownership, and are preparing a big parade in the interests of the "Little Ballot" for April 20.

50 LABOR CANDIDATES.

Contributions to the campaign are increasing, $300 having been received to date. The municipal ownership central committee will provide speakers for all meetings held by labor organizations to further the "Little Ballot" campaign. The whole procedure is a systematic and determined opposition to the competition of the City Government and the Chicago City Railway Company.

THREE WAGE CUTS.

Three great industries have witnessed reductions in a few short months.

First the textile workers, the poorest paid of any class of labor, were compelled to part with 10 per cent of their meager earnings to ensure dividends to the master class.

Then, after an exciting season of negotiation and conciliation, the miners of the bituminous fields made profits safe for the operators by accepting a reduction of 2½ per cent in wages.

Now comes the report from Pittsburg that officials of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers have conceded the reduction demanded by the United States Steel Corporation, and the scale will be cut 20 per cent.

* * *

Report from London says the Labor people, in anticipation of the overthrow of the government and an early national election, are striking every nerve to perfect their organization and raise funds to make a vigorous campaign. There are now over 60 Labor party candidates for Parliament in the field, and the old party politicians are at a loss to gauge the strength of the new force which threatens to make heavy inroads in many districts.

DEFYING CONVICT LAW.

Barney Cohen, President of the Illinois State Federation of Labor, declares that the Illinois anti-convict labor law may not become law July 1.

"Instead of preparing to dismantle the shops in the state penal institutions, as would be expected naturally," said President Cohen, "they have informed us that the machinery is not only being overhauled and repaired, as for many seasons past, but that new machinery has been contracted for and already purchased for at least one of the penitentiaries.

"I want to know if the 600,000 trades union members in the State of Illinois are to sit down quietly and see influence of any sort whatever override the law and force our free workmen to be convict conditions, in order to earn bread for a home for their families? I do not believe they intend to. For my part, I am going to visit every town in the entire State where trades unions are located, and ask the members to write to the State authorities protesting against the contract, objections to this law and urging its enactment and enforcement after July 1 next.

AGAINST TRADING STAMPS.

The Boston and Chelsea Centra Labor Unions and the retail grocers and grocers' clerks of Chelsea are about to make war to abolish the use of trading samps. They base their opposition on the ground that the use of the stamp is an attempt to get something for nothing from the people, and that it tends to the production and sale of cheap goods and to decrease the wages of clerks. In accordance with the restrictions, the Legislative committee of the Boston Central Labor Union has introduced a bill to abolish the trading stamp, and Simeon Myers will speak in behalf of it.

NEW USE FOR ASBESTOS.

Asbestos is a cloth woven from mineral fibres taken from the surface of certain rocks found chiefly in Quebec. Besides theatre curtains, it is used for firemen's helmets, jackets, and leggings, and for gloves and shields for men working at the mouths of furnaces. An interesting way in which it is now utilized is in the form of surgeons in making splints and dressing wounds. Cotton and wool must be specially treated to be rendered absolutely clean and antiseptic, while asbestos is naturally so. The standard price of the cloth in three dollars a yard, but when made into a Bronson's jacket and leggings, the latter cost about fifty dollars.

MINERS TELL THEIR SIDE.

Officers of the Western Federation of Miners request union people everywhere to write to Congressmen or Senators from their States, requesting a copy of the statement of the Western Federation of Miners introduced by Senator Patterson of Colorado. This statement is a condensed history of the corporate war against the Western Federation of Miners, compiled by the officers of the organization and the carefully reviews the Colorado strike. This is a public document free to those who apply for it.

WAGE AGREEMENTS SOON.

The return of the Chicago delegates to the National Trades' Convention in Philadelphia is anxiously awaited by the unions of that city, who expect to take up the questions of wage agreements April 1. The policy of the manufacturers is now being fixed at Philadelphia, and while the Chicago Metal Trades' Association is not bound to that policy many influential members are affiliated and the understanding reached there is expected to dominate the local agreements. The tendency seems to be to settle present disputes and avoid new ones. Joint trade councils are being urged by both the trades unions and the manufacturers.

FIGHT FOR LIVING WAGES.

Employes of the Roy Watchcase Company of New York are on strike to resist a proposed reduction in wages and to force the reinstatement of discharged members of the union.

The Suddenly Watchcase Company, established twenty years ago by Brooklyn Knights of Labor as a co-operative concern, has signed an agreement to place the Jewelers' Protective Union on its products, the watchcase makers having become Local No. 14, of the International Jewelry Workers' Union.

SHRINK NOT FROM TRUTH.

"They are slaves who fear to speak
For the fallen and the weak;
They are slaves who will not choose
Hatred, scoffing and abuse
Rather than in silence shrink
From the truth they needs must think;
They are slaves who dare not be
In the right with two or three."
—James Russell Lowell.

BRIEF LABOR NOTES.

Despite the station of Thomas A. Edison over the protest of the Electrical Workers' Union and for his patent on the stock ticker, he received by no means an easy berth from the Gold Exchange.

The Workers' Union, 5, of Somerville, of the International Association of Machinists, has voted an assessment of 10 cents a week upon its 600 members to aid their striking fellowmen in Trenton, N. J. The union also gives $5 to the Pickett memorial fund, $5 to the Sullivan fund, Donovan, Daniel Donohoe and James Haley are the delegates to the national convention.

Charges that Carnegie's fortune was "blood money" are made by Rev. Samuel Lowell, pastor for the action of Detroit City Council, which voted to decline the investment of $750,000 for a central library and branches.

* * *

The Granite Cutters' Union has to its organization the Granite Workers' Union, which refuses to protect the latter's funds of $500.00 with which to prosecute any fights.

* * *

The Iowa House of Representatives has passed a bill prohibiting railroads from compelling trainmen to work more than sixteen hours a twenty-four, except in cases of wrecks, which was signed by the trainmen's organizations. A proposed bill to punish picketing, boycotting and blacklisting failed to pass.

"What Trade Unions are Doing" is set down as Frank A. Foster's theme for the Lincoln Club, Tremont avenue, Tuesday night.

The next meeting of the reopened Ladies' Auxiliary of the Machinists' lodges of Boston will take place in the Wells Memorial Building on Friday, April 8.

John Turner, general organizer of the International Brotherhood of Blacksmiths and Helpers, Federal Labor Union, will be entertained at Ellis Island, N. Y., under the auspices of the Central Federated Union, this evening, to-night at Paine Memorial Hall, No. 11 Appleton street.

Gold Gilders' Local Union will hold a special meeting next Monday in New England Hall, No. 987 Washington street.

I AM AGAINST JUDGE PARKER

—W. J. BRYAN

NEW HAVEN, March 29.—William J. Bryan, in replying to questions on national politics, said:

"I am against Judge Parker. Why nominate an interrogation point?

"I am not in alliance with Mr. Hearst. I don't endorse him more than others I have named as available candidates. Mr. Hearst stands for many things that the people of this country demand. The accusation that he is trying to buy his nomination ought to be silenced him to the very people who say it, because they have been in the business of buying elections in the past.

"The coming campaign will not be for the election of a President, but for the election of a Supreme Court, so that corporations succeed they will have the people at their mercy for the next ten years."

NO VIVISECTION AT HARVARD

Harvard scientists declare themselves opposed to the anti-vivisection agitation now going on in Massachusetts. While they deny that any torturing of live animals is practiced in the zoological laboratories under their charge, they assert that any such law as the Anti-vivisection Society is seeking to have passed would hamper the progress of their work as well as scientists everywhere.

Professor William E. Castle of the zoological department, when seen by a reporter for the AMERICAN, said:

"No vivisection is practiced at Harvard. We have live animals of all kinds, from butterflies to rabbits, mice and guinea pigs, with which we perform experiments in our laboratories, but there is no torture connected with any of these experiments.

"I do feel that any such law as the Anti-vivisection Society is seeking to have passed, which, of course, would be most harmful to the progress of zoological knowledge, and would retard the progress of science here at Harvard as well as all over the country."

Want Advertisements.

There were three and one half columns of classified advertisements in the first issue of Hearst's Boston Sunday American.

A rate card for this kind of advertising had not been sent out.

The general public hadn't the faintest idea what it would cost to insert a want advertisement.

Yet people walked into the counting room and left these small advertisements, paying for them FIFTEEN CENTS per agate line, when they were set without display, and TWENTY CENTS per agate line FOR THE WHOLE advertisement if ANY display was used.

No advertising is of greater human interest than these small, unpretentious announcements of what the great majority of the people want.

The cyclopedias—full of information—full of interest—full of nature, the greatest educator of all.

Hearst's Boston American should be, and probably will be, the natural medium for the public want advertising. These advertisements, since The American is the paper of the people for the people all the time.

Remember the rates: advertisements set without any display, Fifteen Cents per agate line—seven words to the line. Advertisements set with display, Twenty Cents per agate line—seven words to the line.

The above rates apply to both the Evening and Sunday American—for the present.

The only exception to the above rates is that ON SUNDAYS only, the rate for Situations Wanted will be FIVE CENTS per agate line—seven words to the line. In the evening, the rate is Fifteen Cents per agate line.

Send in your Wants to Hearst's Boston American, 89-82 Summer St.—accompanied by cash.

MEN STRIKE FOR WOMEN; WIN

Chivalrous Action by Workers Leads to Shorter Day For Fair Sex.

STATE BOARD ARBITRATES

Because their fellow laborers, the men, went out on strike in championing their rights, some forty women employed by George Bradley are now rejoicing over a reduction in the day's work from nine to eight hours.

An agreement was signed by the men a year ago, making an eight-hour day for themselves. Through inadvertence, says Mr. Bradley, the eight-hour agreement was not extended to the women who continued to work nine hours.

Last week eleven men struck because the proprietor would not accord equal rights to the women. The matter was carried before the State Board of Arbitration, which has just decided in favor of the strikers.

The men claimed that the original agreement was made to include the women, but that Mr. Bradley changed it so as to include the men, who signed it under a misapprehension. Mr. Bradley claimed that he did not change the paper, but that he supposed the agreement included only the men.

Why Don't You Ride Your Bicycle?

CAMBRIDGE AND CHARLESTOWN HAVE

BIG RALLIES FOR HEARST!

Opening Guns in New Yorker's Campaign Fired in Cambridge and Charlestown---Congressman Livernash and George Fred Williams Predict Democratic Success---Worcester Men for Hearst.

It was a heartily enthusiastic gathering of voters that filled Roughan's Hall, Charlestown, last evening, at the rally of the Ward 2 Hearst Club of Ward 2. It was a gathering composed of thoughtful citizens, workers for their daily bread, who showed by their rapt attention and earnest appreciation of the arguments submitted to them that they are keenly alive to the issues of the impending political campaign, and that they are determined that in the selection of candidates for that campaign their interests shall be amply conserved.

It was a gathering that occupied every seat in the large hall and thronged the corridors, and none left until the last speaker had concluded and had received earnest approval in cheers which fairly shook the building.

The object of the meeting was to call attention to the delegate tickets which will be submitted to the ward 5 voters at the Democratic caucuses on April 11, one of which is pledged to the candidacy of William R. Hearst, of New York, for the Democratic nomination for the Presidency of the United States.

At every mention of Mr. Hearst's name there was an outburst of applause, and it was plain to all that the Democrats of Ward 5 are true in spirit to those who were true to the Democratic party in the hours of its greatest trials, and especially so to Mr. Hearst.

The meeting was called to order by Councilman William F. Murray, Jr., who heads the delegation pledged to vote for delegates instructed to vote for Mr. Hearst's nomination. The speakers were the Hon. George Fred Williams of Dedham, ex-Representative James A. Watson of Ward 18, John J. Barry, secretary of the Cab and Wagon Drivers' Union of Boston, Martin P. Higgins, president of the International Printing Pressmen's Union; James F. Duffy, business agent of the International Teamsters' Union, Local No. 25, and Congressman Livernash of California, a close friend and companion of Mr. Hearst, and himself a friend of organized labor.

Mr. Murray, in opening the meeting, said:

First Gun of Campaign.

"We are gathered here this evening to fire the first gun that is fired in the Bunker Hill District in the great Presidential campaign of 1904, which will result, we all hope, in the nomination and election of a Democratic President of the United States. We are assembled together to discuss National issues and not local politics. There is a well-defined contest being waged in the city of Boston and the State of Massachusetts over the selection of delegates to the State Convention, and to the Congressional District Convention. Two weeks from tomorrow evening it will be decided whether they will be favorable to Richard Olney or to William R. Hearst of New York City.

"We are here to-night to advocate the cause of Mr. Hearst.

The chairman then introduced John J. Barry, Secretary of the Cab and Wagon Drivers' Union, of Boston, who said in part:

"Some people only talk for the cause of labor, but the publisher of a paper for workers had made good by work. He has been on strike that has aided organized labor in its recent great struggles for its rights, and it is time that we had men in public office that can be depended upon to give the plain people as much consideration as the plutocratic class."

Mr. Duffy said that he was for Mr. Hearst.

Another speaker who received an ovation as a leader of organized labor was Martin F. Higgins. There was thunderous applause as he closed with a tribute to Mr. Hearst as a true friend of organized labor. Mr. Higgins said in part:

"Since more the American people are called upon to determine carefully whether the great bulk of the people are to take an active interest in the government and to see that in the good that comes from a government of the people and, now, again, we are in another battle in politics, it is pleasing to know that we have men in public office in their homes under the shadow of Bunker Hill, are able to be counted on and, as is evidenced by this gathering, are determined that candidates who truly represent them shall be chosen.

"It is a pleasure to see the people looking toward the election as their civic leader of one whom we can regard as a champion of the cause of their rights, and I trust that when the convention comes we will find you all there in magnificent numbers, to give expression through your ballots of the sentiments which you have at heart and of your loyalty to him who has been loyal to you, William Randolph Hearst." (Cheers.)

Olney's Methods Attacked.

Ex-Representative James A. Watson, of Ward 18, was the address with a vigorous attack on the methods of the anti-Hearst Democrats, who represent, he declared as favoring the candidacy of Richard Olney. "They offer a candidate," said Mr. Watson, "who has his only record the fact that despite the protest of the Democratic Governors of 17 States when he was Attorney-General of the United States, he caused President Cleveland to send into Illinois United States troops to shoot down in cold blood men who were doing no more than peaceably trying to secure a fair day's wage for an honest day's work.

"But a question of veracity had arisen. Mr. Olney says he isn't a candidate, and Mr. Olney is. The whole plan, gentlemen, is a cloak under which to present the most democratic nomination to the man who did the most in 1896 to defeat the Democratic party, Grover Cleveland. I beg you, when you go to the caucus, to remember these traitors to the party and to remember the friend of the workingman, Hearst, and while the government was engaged in upturning red tape, send millionaires out of the necessaries of life to poor, flood-swept Galveston, who on all occasions have loosened his purse strings at the call of the helpless and the needy, and whose every public act has been prompted by the desire to achieve that which was best for the whole people. That friend is William R. Hearst of New York."

James M. Duffy spoke briefly and in a humorous vein. He stood for labor, he said, and always, he said, and urged his audience to do likewise.

Mr. Williams was introduced by Chairman Murray as the leader of the Democratic opinion and leader of the Hearst campaign in Massachusetts, and the man who, if elected will be a delegate at large to the next Democratic National convention from the old Bay State."

Mr. Williams said in part:

Moneyed Men Fear Masses.

"My friends, you probably do not realize what it was which arrayed the plutocratic forces of this country in battle against a man—or rather to a corporation—against the first really true Democrat that we have had to the front since the days of Andrew Jackson—William Jennings Bryan. There was complaint that he had raised a new issue when he was imperilling the monetary system of this country. That was the point which followed for every single plank in the Democratic platform in 1896. Gentlemen, I tell you it was no plank in the Democratic platform which was in the interests of the great masses of this country that the moneyed interests of the Democratic party rebelled against, but it was the fact that it was the people should feel their power and know it, and take a step to the control of our government.

"Gentlemen, put a man at the head of this government whose first thought is, How shall I benefit the toilers of the land, who produces its wealth; how shall I help the weak to get out of the embrace of the strong; how shall I help those who are struggling to obtain the benefits of popular government; how shall I clear the clouds; how shall I assist the suffering and needy? When such a man comes into power, and you realize what such leadership means, there will be a generation pass before the party which puts this man to the front can obtain upon the presidential nomination.

"The man who stands for the common people is the man who is entitled to the suffrage of the workingman. The candidacy of William R. Hearst is the candidacy of intelligence. Honest working men are all on the side of William R. Hearst. There is no question of State pride here. There is no man who wears a workingman's coat who has ever seen Mr. Olney. Mr. Hearst is too big a man to be confined to one State."

Harry Lloyd, of Boston, a labor leader of national repute, said:

"I am here to tell the working men that if they are true to the principles of the labor movement they are bound to support the Hearst delegations. William R. Hearst is the constant champion of the oppressed poor. There is more than a party fight here. There is a fight against the gerrymander which is now controlling the means of existence. We must support a young and fearless champion."

Philip J. Doherty, of Boston, followed Mr. Lloyd, saying, in part:

Hearst's Fight Against Trusts.

"The movement for the selection of Hearst delegates is inspiring reason for an opportunity for our party to place itself on record, either as favoring trust, monopoly and corporate control as the leadership of the party organization, or as favoring a control sympathetic with the hopes and aspirations of the toiling masses which make up the rank and file of the Democracy of Massachusetts.

"With the Democratic toilers of Massachusetts make the exertion and take hold with a spirit and a determination that will compel their party to be traded away to the trusts.

"A vote for delegates in favor of Hearst is a vote in favor of an ever loyal friend of the Democracy. He is a true Democrat, a party, and he never sulked in his tent. He was always in the front of battle. He was ever the true friend of labor. He forced the adoption of the only remedy for the compelled legislation to require the sale of ice in small quantities to the very poor in New York. He exposed and defeated the great Ramapo water grab, which would have cost the city of New York nigh on to one hundred millions. His papers have the largest circulation in the world, stamp him as the greatest modern reformer in the greatest modern profession, requiring ability, ingenuity, statesmanship and a permanent able capacity for judgment of intellectual worth as to its conformity and of public opinion as to his constituency.

"His unique and unparalleled power he has used to elevate the lowly, to uplift and educate humanity, and to secure the most liberal good government.

"My question is, Democrats, made of his stern material?

"To that question I reply that he was taught in the school of philanthropy of which he is one of the most American members. Mr. Hearst's ability to serve the people, and it was bring him to success on that policy I do not think he is likely to give it up. (Great and prolonged applause.)

Mr. Williams was followed by Congressman Livernash, who had journeyed from coast to coast to explain to the people his connection with Mr. Hearst's candidacy. The young Californian was received a reception that proved to him that he had a welcome place in New England. He said, in part:

"Drive Out the Republicans."

"Men of Massachusetts—It is exceedingly important to the nation that the Republican party be driven from power and it will be driven from power whenever the plain people shall feel in their hearts that the Democracy earnestly intends to battle for them, free of entanglements of fools. Whether in the Autumn elections the Democratic party shall or shall not retain its chance of regaining control of the House of Representatives and the legislative branch of the Federal Government depends almost entirely, I think, on whether it does or does not give the people as its presidential candidate a man known to the people as one with the manners of our citizens—a man already quite known by them to be true in fellowship and sanely theirs. As against President Roosevelt or Cannon, no Democrat can win who has not in his very heart and mind as firmly established himself, by his claims on the consideration of the people, in plain popular sympathy.

"It is exceedingly important that the Republican party be dispossessed of authority, because in no other way can we hope to arrest the dangerous drift toward political and industrial shackles in the very men of Massachusetts, that our republic is fast losing its democratic quality and falling into disregard of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, and is becoming the creature of a steadily narrowing privileged class.

Mr. Livernash then pointed out the relation of the Federal Government to the preservation of the liberties the Republic was founded to secure, and by convincing examples of the disregard of these rights by the Republican Administration and both branches of Congress.

Mr. Livernash then discussed the attitude of the Republican party toward trusts, declaring that they were using their power to be so hostile to everything tending to abridge the unlimited privileges of the immensely rich by enlargement of the comfort and general welfare of others as that could the masses. Washington politics as under a microscope they would without hesitation pass the Republican party into retirement. He showed the pernicious influence of labor unless it be sound, and strongly condemned the President for want of genuine sympathy with them.

Representative William Randolph Hearst he said:

"It is the duty of the Democratic National Convention to nominate Mr. Hearst for President. He is the only person mentioned for the honor who can possibly be elected, for he is the only one mentioned who has the confidence of the men who work—the millions who are poor, and the only moderately rich—the millions who, as laborers, seamen, mechanics, farmers, merchants, carry the burdens.

"He can be elected because the multitude already believe in him. His opinions, his sympathies, his works, are known to reason to sea. They form a platform accepted as able to the interests of the nation. If he should be thrust aside by politicians in the interest of any men less in number than the millions at the bottom the Democratic party would be crushing out the hope of the people. If, however, he should be placed at the head of the Democratic host, the Democrats will be given another opportunity to right grave wrongs and to restore virtuous tendencies—to make the republic what the fathers intended it should always be."

DOHERTY HOPES FOR A HEARST VICTORY

East Cambridge, the home of the Democratic party of the State, and the most ardent stronghold of Democratic successes in Middlesex county, swung into line for William R. Hearst with an inspiring burst of enthusiasm last evening. It was well known that the candidacy of Mr. Hearst for the Democratic nomination for President was in the eyes of the many Cambridge voters. It remained, however, for last night's rousing demonstration at the hall of the Cambridge Athletic Club to give evidence of the remarkable growth of the Hearst sentiment in the city across the river.

Held simultaneously with the monster rally in Charlestown in the interest of the New York progressive, the meeting in Cambridge was distinguished by an equally large attendance and if it were possible, an even greater exhibition of real enthusiasm every mention of Mr. Hearst's name was the signal for deafening applause.

Frederick Mahoney, one of the old-time Cambridge Democrats, opened the meeting and introduced, as Chairman, James T. Barrett, for several years a member of the Cambridge Board of Aldermen.

Mr. Barrett took the chair in view of his address the question of "State Pride," pointing out the inevitable fate of Democratic victories. The vital issues for which Mr. Hearst stands for a more matter of State pride.

Hearst the Only Leader.

"It is not many years," he said, "since certain wiseacres were telling us of the impossibility of Democratic victory in this city of ours. In spite of the pessimists, however, we have won repeated Democratic victories. There are pessimists now who incline to doubt Mr. Hearst. I tell you there is one man who can lead the National Democracy to victory, and that man is William Randolph Hearst."

Enlarging upon Mr. Barrett's remarks, Frank Curran, a sterling Democrat of long service, indicated the position of the leading man in connection with Mr. Hearst's candidacy upon the presidential nomination.

"The man who stands for the common people is the man who is entitled to the suffrage of the workingman. The candidacy of William R. Hearst is the candidacy of intelligence. Honest working men are all on the side of William R. Hearst. There is no question of State pride here. There is no man who wears a workingman's coat who has ever seen Mr. Olney. "My question is, Democrats, made of his stern material?

"To that question I reply that he was taught in the school of philanthropy of which he is one of the most American members. Mr. Hearst's ability to serve the people, and it was bring him to success on that policy I do not think he is likely to give it up. (Great and prolonged applause.)

Mr. Williams was followed by Congressman Livernash, who had journeyed from coast to coast to explain to the people his connection with Mr. Hearst's candidacy. The young Californian was received a reception that proved to him that he had a welcome place in New England. He said, in part:

"Drive Out the Republicans."

"Men of Massachusetts—It is exceedingly important to the nation that the Republican party be driven from power and it will be driven from power whenever the plain people shall feel in their hearts that the Democracy earnestly intends to battle for them, free of entanglements of fools. Whether in the Autumn elections the Democratic party shall or shall not retain its chance of regaining control of the House of Representatives and the legislative branch of the Federal Government depends almost entirely, I think, on whether it does or does not give the people as its presidential candidate a man known to the people as one with the manners of our citizens—a man already quite known by them to be true in fellowship and sanely theirs. As against President Roosevelt or Cannon, no Democrat can win who has not in his very heart and mind as firmly established himself, by his claims on the consideration of the people, in plain popular sympathy.

"It is exceedingly important that the Republican party be dispossessed of authority, because in no other way can we hope to arrest the dangerous drift toward political and industrial shackles in the very men of Massachusetts, that our republic is fast losing its democratic quality and falling into disregard of the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution, and is becoming the creature of a steadily narrowing privileged class.

Mr. Livernash then pointed out the relation of the Federal Government to the preservation of the liberties the Republic was founded to secure, and by convincing examples of the disregard of these rights by the Republican Administration and both branches of Congress.

Mr. Livernash then discussed the attitude of the Republican party toward trusts, declaring that they were using their power to be so hostile to everything tending to abridge the unlimited privileges of the immensely rich by enlargement of the comfort and general welfare of others as that could the masses. Washington politics as under a microscope they would without hesitation pass the Republican party into retirement. He showed the pernicious influence of labor unless it be sound, and strongly condemned the President for want of genuine sympathy with them.

Representative William Randolph Hearst he said:

"It is the duty of the Democratic National Convention to nominate Mr. Hearst for President. He is the only person mentioned for the honor who can possibly be elected, for he is the only one mentioned who has the confidence of the men who work—the millions who are poor, and the only moderately rich—the millions who, as laborers, seamen, mechanics, farmers, merchants, carry the burdens.

"He can be elected because the multitude already believe in him. His opinions, his sympathies, his works, are known to reason to sea. They form a platform accepted as able to the interests of the nation. If he should be thrust aside by politicians in the interest of any men less in number than the millions at the bottom the Democratic party would be crushing out the hope of the people. If, however, he should be placed at the head of the Democratic host, the Democrats will be given another opportunity to right grave wrongs and to restore virtuous tendencies—to make the republic what the fathers intended it should always be."

DOHERTY HOPES FOR A HEARST VICTORY

East Cambridge, the home of the Democratic party of the State, and the most ardent stronghold of Democratic successes in Middlesex county, swung into line for William R. Hearst with an inspiring burst of enthusiasm last evening. It was well known that the candidacy of Mr. Hearst for the Democratic nomination for President was in the eyes of the many Cambridge voters. It remained, however, for last night's rousing demonstration at the hall of the Cambridge Athletic Club to give evidence of the remarkable growth of the Hearst sentiment in the city across the river.

Held simultaneously with the monster rally in Charlestown in the interest of the New York progressive, the meeting in Cambridge was distinguished by an equally large attendance and if it were possible, an even greater exhibition of real enthusiasm every mention of Mr. Hearst's name was the signal for deafening applause.

Frederick Mahoney, one of the old-time Cambridge Democrats, opened the meeting and introduced, as Chairman, James T. Barrett, for several years a member of the Cambridge Board of Aldermen.

Mr. Barrett took the chair in view of his address the question of "State Pride," pointing out the inevitable fate of Democratic victories. The vital issues for which Mr. Hearst stands for a more matter of State pride.

Hearst the Only Leader.

"It is not many years," he said, "since certain wiseacres were telling us of the impossibility of Democratic victory in this city of ours. In spite of the pessimists, however, we have won repeated Democratic victories. There are pessimists now who incline to doubt Mr. Hearst. I tell you there is one man who can lead the National Democracy to victory, and that man is William Randolph Hearst."

Enlarging upon Mr. Barrett's remarks, Frank Curran, a sterling Democrat of long service, indicated the position of the leading man in connection with Mr. Hearst's candidacy upon the presidential nomination.

"The man who stands for the common people is the man who is entitled to the suffrage of the workingman. The candidacy of William R. Hearst is the candidacy of intelligence. Honest working men are all on the side of William R. Hearst. There is no question of State pride here. There is no man who wears a workingman's coat who has ever seen Mr. Olney. Mr. Hearst is too big a man to be confined to one State."

Harry Lloyd, of Boston, a labor leader of national repute, said:

"I am here to tell the working men that if they are true to the principles of the labor movement they are bound to support the Hearst delegations. William R. Hearst is the constant champion of the oppressed poor. There is more than a party fight here. There is a fight against the gerrymander which is now controlling the means of existence. We must support a young and fearless champion."

Philip J. Doherty, of Boston, followed Mr. Lloyd, saying, in part:

Hearst's Fight Against Trusts.

"The movement for the selection of Hearst delegates is inspiring reason for an opportunity for our party to place itself on record, either as favoring trust, monopoly and corporate control as the leadership of the party organization, or as favoring a control sympathetic with the hopes and aspirations of the toiling masses which make up the rank and file of the Democracy of Massachusetts.

"With the Democratic toilers of Massachusetts make the exertion and take hold with a spirit and a determination that will compel their party to be traded away to the trusts.

"A vote for delegates in favor of Hearst is a vote in favor of an ever loyal friend of the Democracy. He is a true Democrat, a party, and he never sulked in his tent. He was always in the front of battle. He was ever the true friend of labor. He forced the adoption of the only remedy for the compelled legislation to require the sale of ice in small quantities to the very poor in New York. He exposed and defeated the great Ramapo water grab, which would have cost the city of New York nigh on to one hundred millions. His papers have the largest circulation in the world, stamp him as the greatest modern reformer in the greatest modern profession, requiring ability, ingenuity, statesmanship and a permanent able capacity for judgment of intellectual worth as to its conformity and of public opinion as to his constituency.

"His unique and unparalleled power he has used to elevate the lowly, to uplift and educate humanity, and to secure the most liberal good government.

"My question is, Democrats, made of his stern material?

"To that question I reply that he was taught in the school of philanthropy of which he is one of the most American members. Mr. Hearst's ability to serve the people, and it was bring him to success on that policy I do not think he is likely to give it up. (Great and prolonged applause.)

FIERY RESOLUTIONS DENOUNCING TRUSTS

Denouncing the trusts as evils that have become a national disgrace, the Massachusetts Conference of Methodist Episcopal Men's International Union, at Northampton, Mass., has adopted resolutions condemning the monopolies and declaring their determination to fight them to the bitter end. The fiery resolutions say, in part:

"The trusts care nothing for the politician, the press, the pulpit, the judiciary, the Congress. Mere figureheads are with them. But we have one champion who has feared above a generation alone, as well as in fully of the times, by coming to our side and giving our cause with all the zeal, eloquence, logic and reason that a just, true and righteous cause can command, would be in William Randolph Hearst, who has done more for the cause of labor than any other man in the country. In Mr. Hearst we have a man who will never allow the combined mass of people to become a weak community."

The members of the union have gone on record as endorsing Mr. Hearst's attitude and pledging him every assistance in his battle for industrial freedom.

Grip,
Nervousness,
Pneumonia,
Blood Trouble.

The doctor told her she might never walk again. To-day she is well and strong. Paine's Celery Compound cured the REAL cause of her sickness, fed strength to her nerves, purified her blood and drove out disease.

Paine's Celery Compound makes people well. It is the one Spring Remedy that purifies without weakening. It feeds strength to the nerves and gives buoyant vitality and health to the whole system.

It stops the drain on the nervous system, expels harmful humors from the blood and increases its volume and its strength giving qualities.

Her Letter:

Tunbridge, Vt., Dec. 11, 1903.—"I began taking Paine's Celery Compound in the spring after having spent a year and a half confined to my bed on account of having pneumonia and a bad knee, due to blood trouble. At the time I began taking your medicine I was very nervous and did not want to see any one—only my own folks.

"The doctor told me all that there was not anything else they could do for me, and also said they did not think that I would ever be any better, and if I was better I would never be able to walk again.

"A friend of mine was taking Paine's Celery Compound at the time and I thought I would try it. I took several bottles before I saw much improvement. But soon

It is my wonder that also delights to recommend it to her friends, and watches with pleasure the benefit that they get from Paine's Celery Compound."

Her Letter:

Astoria, L. I., Dec. 4, 1903.—"For several years I have used Paine's Celery Compound, and it is held in high esteem in our family. I think it would be without it, for certainly it has been a great benefit to me. I have not had an attack of neuralgia since I began using it.

"Have taken the Compound recently for pain in the back and gripe, with complete curative result. Have also recommended your valuable medicine to many of my friends and know positively that they have had good results."—Mrs. J. R. Bennett, 11 N. Henry st.

"The only Real Cure is that which removes the Real Cause. Treating symptoms, pimples, eruptions, etc., is only waste of time. The cause of nearly all disease and blood impurity and pain is in the INNER KIDNEYS."

SPORTS OF WORLD WRITTEN FOR THE BOSTON AMERICAN BY ITS STAFF OF NOTED EXPERTS

REFEREE GRANEY TELLS WHY HE GAVE THE FIGHT TO BRITT

BY EDDIE GRANEY

Who refereed the Young Corbett-Britt battle last Friday night.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 29.—I realize that it is bad for me from a sportsman's standpoint for a referee to discuss his decision, but there has been so much kicking by the people against whom I decided the recent fight between Britt and Corbett that I feel it incumbent on me to explain my position. If I live for ten years, or for a hundred, nothing will convince me that I did not render a just decision when I gave the fight to Britt.

I think that it is generally recognized that I have some ability as a boxer. I don't think the people can conscientiously say that I am not thoroughly familiar with the practical side of the ring game.

Now, so far as my honesty is concerned, I don't think it necessary for me to speak upon that point. The people who know me and like me will say I am honest, and those who don't like me are liable to say that I am dishonest. That is one of the results of holding one of the most ungrateful positions in the sporting world—a referee.

Only Argument with Corbett.

As to punching in the clinches—that is the only argument that I have with Young Corbett, whom I consider a good fellow and a thorough sportsman.

During Corbett's first contest with Young Hanlon he never struck a blow in a clinch during the twenty rounds they fought. In his second fight with Hanlon he had a man against him who was not aggressive, who used what is known as the "crouch," and who let Corbett do practically all of the leading.

So when the stage of Hanlon's weakness arrived Hanlon did the holding on. While he held on in the clinches, Corbett's two hands were free, and he used them to the best of his ability. So doing he lived up to the Marquis of Queensberry rules, which stipulate that a man with two hands free may punch in the clinches.

During Friday night's fight Britt did all the forcing. At times he compelled Corbett to clinch. I did not compel them to break for the first fourteen or fifteen rounds. After that it became practically a wrestling match in spots, neither of them had both hands free. Therefore, according to the rules under which they fought, they could not punch in the clinches, and when I told them to break they would not break, and the only times I forced them to break were when they were wrestling or holding.

Corbett, while unjustly criticising me, has said that I grabbed his hand from his right side, or, rather, that in breaking the clinches I interfered with his right. If I interfered with his right hand, as it is claimed, I must have also interfered with Britt's left, which is his best hand.

Corbett said that I never separated him during the clinches of any of his other contests. That is not true. In no starting the little chap is very much mistaken. Any one with a memory can see him fight Terry McGovern knows perfectly well that I had to partially disable in the ring in order to force the fighters to break from the second to the fourteenth round.

Corbett Forced to Clinch.

In the fight with McGovern Corbett was forced to clinch just as he was with Britt. Both Britt and McGovern cut out the pace for Corbett, so that if I didn't break the men in both fights the battles would have degenerated into mere wrestling matches.

I sincerely hope that Britt will grant Corbett a return match in the near future. He ought to give Corbett a chance. I hope they will select some good California referee. There are quite a few here, but if they are afraid of the "native son" I think it would be a good idea to import an outside referee.

Slam bang admirers received their fill of the boxing sport at Mechanics' Hall at the A. A. U. championships, when crack local boys surprised the New Yorkers and captured four out of the seven championships, the referees stopped several bouts to prevent a knockout.

Emory Payne of the Mott Haven A. C. was whipped to a standstill by Billy Rodenback, of the New West Side A. C., in the heavy-weight class. The latter also won the middle-weight honors from C. T. Mitchell, of Waltham, who detained Joe O'Brien was the winner in the bantam boy class. Mitchell was the goods in the 145 class. Fitzpatrick, of South Boston, was champ of the 125-pounders. In the light-weight clash, Goliath Jones jabbed his white rivals around the ring. Jeremiah Casey, of the New West Side A. C., whipped Tommy Stone, also of New York, in the feather bouts.

Despite a broken left thumb, which he put to the ball in the first round, Rodenback laced it into Payne, the New York fire fighter, for all he was worth. Blows on the jaw, stomach and head were sent in such rapid succession that Payne was groggy at the end of the fourth.

With his 207 pounds Payne wasn't able to make much impression on his adversary, except in the first two or three minutes of boxing, when Payne had a slight advantage. After that time the Mott Haven lad was lifted all around the ring.

Payne tried to set a fast pace in the third round, but was given an awful walloping. His boxing was tame and like a novice. He could not deliver his punches with any accuracy.

On the other hand, Rodenback exhibited the most science of any one in the finals. His work showed hard training, and the crowd thought he deserved all of the honors captured.

TANNEHILL IS WILLING TO BE A BEANEATER

Trade to Boston Not Disagreeable, and Not at a Reduced Salary, He Says.

Jesse Tannehill asserts he does not know why Griffin consented to trade him to Boston. He is practising with the team at Macon.

"Search me," said he, when asked about the trade. "It may be because 'Grif' had an idea I would go to Portland, Ore. 'Fred' Ely, who had secured an interest in the Portland, Ore., club, wrote me and asked me to join the team. I answered that I would do so if they attempted to trade me to Detroit, provided I could purchase half of his interest in the team in Portland. Perhaps 'Grif' got the idea in his head I was going to the coast, and he therefore traded me to Boston. I was perfectly satisfied to go to Boston, as I believe there is no better ball town in the country to play in. I intend to do my best to advance the interests of the club.

"All this talk about my being a disorganizer is very silly. Most of the talk has arisen since I left Pittsburg.

"I noted that a writer with National League tendencies says that I was forced to go to Boston at a lower salary than I received in New York. That is not so. I had a two-year contract and that will go in Boston just the same as if I played in New York.

CELLS NOT FIT FOR DOGS, EVEN

Changes Likely to Be Made at Springfield Jail by Commissioners.

SPRINGFIELD, March 29.—Because of what they saw here in their tour through the City Jail, it is understood that the Prison Committee of the Massachusetts Legislature will make a strong protest to the Prison Commissioners against the management.

Although the visit of the committee was expected, no especial preparations were made, and the members were allowed to go where they willed and see things just as they were. When some of them passed through the padded cells in the basement, where the delirious prisoners are confined, their indignation was strongly expressed.

"Why," remarked a member of the committee, as he peered into the dark padded recesses, "these would give a man delirium, even if he did not have it."

"The cells must be changed," they said, "for it is not right to confine dogs, much less men, in them."

KID GRIFFO SEEKS MATCH

Wants to Meet Briggs at Baltimore for 15-Round Bout in April.

An offer from the Eutaw A. C., of Baltimore, was received to-day by Tom Maguire, of Boston, to match Jimmy Briggs and Kid Griffo, for a fifteen-round bout in the Southern city on April 12.

If Briggs does not agree to meet the Quaker City boxer, Manager Maguire has another good man ready to tackle the Kid. Manager Joe Barrett says he believes Briggs and Griffo would be a great card to pack the house.

Maguire, who is also manager of Billy Gardner, Lowell's crack lightweight, would be willing to match his man with Briggs on any terms.

Gardner won from Briggs at the old Isoleric A. C. Maguire says he wants to show that he can repeat the trick before any club.

ATTELL BEATS HERRERA

Big Crowd Sees Clever Boxing and Get a Decision on Points.

CHICAGO, March 29.—Abe Attell, the nimble 122-pound light featherweight champion of the world, gained the decision over Aurelio Herrera in a hotly contested six-round battle before the American Club last night.

An immense crowd witnessed the fight, and the decision was just, although it did not meet with the approval of the crowd.

Attell's ability to land on Herrera at will was demonstrated early in the game, but the effects of the lefts which Attell persisted in jabbing into Herrera's face was to enrage the Mexican rather than discourage him.

The result was an exhibition of boxing which drew cheers from the gallery throughout every round.

Not a drop of blood was drawn in the entire fight, and at the finish the fighters looked as if they had stepped from a warm bath. It was a sparring match pure and simple, in which Attell, by his superior skill and foot work, won out.

SEES JOHNSON ON THURSDAY

All sorts of rumors as to Ben Johnson's non-appearance in the city, when it was believed he would arrive last night, have set the Boston American baseball tangle, are in the air.

Some hitch in that club's affairs, it is hinted, drove Mr. Johnson to Chicago.

John F. Fitzgerald, of the syndicate that is said to be after the nine, said to-day: "I am amazed at the turn of affairs in this matter. Mr. Johnson has been quoted as saying his sanction was necessary to ratify the sale. What bearing his views will have, I cannot say until I see him some day this week.

Word was sent to the BOSTON AMERICAN by "Sockless" Jerry Simon that Fitzgerald would have an important meeting on Thursday next and arrive at an understanding.

MATCHES IN CITY LEAGUE.

Some good bowling matches will be rolled in the City League to-morrow night. These games are scheduled: Hub at Boylston, McCarthy at St. James, Carruth at Mt. Pleasant, Murray & Irwin at Old Colony, Sudbury at City Hall, Somerset at Jefferson, Rexford at Dartmouth.

OUT OF GERMAN AUTO RACE.

PITTSFIELD, Mass., March 29.—Alden Sampson, 2d, to-day notified the Automobile Club of America that he would be unable to get his racing car ready in time for the international cup race in Germany on June 17, and requested that his entry be canceled.

SYDNEY OPEN FOR BATTLE.

Young Sydney wants to meet Young Donohue, or any other 126-pound man in the country. Sydney has been making a good showing in the ring lately. He has bested some of the best lads in New England.

BAY STATE BENCH SHOW

Entries for the third dog show, given by the Bay State Bench Show Association, close to-morrow night. Names should go to the superintendent at No. 60 North Market street, Boston.

The show opens on Friday, April 15, and closes Saturday, in the City Hall, New Bedford.

There are many prizes, and judging from the entries the show will be the most successful the association has ever held.

CANDLEPIN MATCHES.

Though many of the bowling leagues of Boston have finished their regular championship battles, some good lively matches between alley rivals are planned to take place until the last candlepin light flickers out June 7.

LOWELL BOUT IS OFF.

Billy Gardner's match, scheduled for tomorrow night, with Blink McCluskey at Lowell, was declared off today.

DEWEY AND HIS MEN TO GET PRIZE MONEY

WASHINGTON, March 29.—Admiral Dewey and his men have, at last, won their fight for prize money for the capture of Spanish vessels and stores at Manila in May, 1898.

The amount at stake is $828,678, and this, after deducting costs of litigation, will be divided equally among the captors and the navy pension fund.

The District Supreme Court has signed the final decree that closes the long litigation.

EMMONS LOOKS FOR MORE VICE

Judge Emmons says that he is looking for more vicious resorts to close, and that there will be no abatement of the crusade for moral reform in Boston. He said:

"We have put an end to drunkenness on the streets.

"We have tried to prevent men getting drunk by holding saloonkeepers responsible.

"We have stopped prize fighting in Boston.

"We have closed most of the massage parlors.

"We assisted the United States marshals in the raid upon Chinatown, and in doing that the Boston police kept within the law. This action saved the city from a riot. Two Chinese societies were ready to attack each other.

"We know that more than 100 revolvers were bought by them at that time."

TO CROSS POND IN FIVE DAYS

NEW YORK, March 29.—Five days to cross the Atlantic will be the established record if the experiments of the Cunard Steamship Company with the turbine are successful. This would give it control of the ocean mail service.

It is said that the Cunard company can afford to experiment with turbines because the British government is footing the bills.

SIX BURGLARS PUT TO FLIGHT

GREENWICH, Ct., March 29.—Burglaries by the wholesale, believed to have been planned for Greenwich, were frustrated by Constable James J. Nedley, night watchman at the depot.

He caught six burglars at work in a store, and with the aid of citizens chased them. The burglars took to the quarry district between Greenwich and Port Chester, where it is believed they are hiding.

COGSWELL FOUNTAIN FOR WEST ROXBURY

After being in storage for years, the Cogswell temperance fountain is to be erected on the public ground at South Conway, South Fairview and Robert street, West Roxbury. Dr. Cogswell, of San Francisco, gave it to the city and it was put up on the Common. Decried as inartistic, it was finally taken down and put out of sight.

"CY" YOUNG IN FINE CONDITION

"Cy" Young, the grand old man of the baseball game, will join the Boston American team at Montgomery tomorrow. He will probably twirl against the local team Friday.

He is in the pink of condition. He says that he never felt better in his life, and capable to slant the ball so that his opponents will find difficulty in touching it.

Young is considered the greatest slab artist in the game to-day by hundreds of fans.

His record has never been approached in the history of the sport. In his 36 years of tossing the ball he has acquitted himself in superb style. He has mowed down more batters than any other man on the firing line.

"Cy" was one of the mainstays in the race for the pennant last season, and the subsequent capturing of the world's laurels. He did the twirling in thirty seven league games. Of this number he had twenty-eight victories to his credit.

"Cy" is the marvel of the baseball world.

Young draws a salary that should be an incentive for any ball player to keep in form. The sum of $10,000 does not grow on every bush. And he knows it.

He is able to do many stunts with the wilow. His average with the stick is distinctly good, and he has rapped out many a timely single that sent in runs, which helped boost the team along toward victory.

As a fielder, "Cy" hasn't any medals on him. Some of his moves in fielding the sphere help keep the spectators in good humor.

GANS BEATS GARDNER.

SAGINAW, Mich., March 29.—At the end of ten rounds of the fastest fighting ever seen here, Joe Gans, the lightweight champion of the world, is a battle for the 20th time, and the decision over Gus Gardner of this city.

ECKERSALL TO TURN A "PRO"?

CHICAGO, March 29.—Discouraged by his inability to keep up a satisfactory standard of his studies, Walter Eckersall, the crack University of Chicago athlete, who gained a national reputation on the gridiron last fall, and who was expected to prove a star on the cinder path and baseball diamond this Spring, may forsake college and turn "pro."

Eckersall received an offer of the Dubuque team yesterday and is carefully considering the proposition.

Many athletes consider Eckersall had but one superior in the quarterback position in the contests, Daly, the Harvard captain, who is now at West Point. Eckersall said that he would reserve his decision for a week.

ANTIQUE EGGS FOR MRS. CARRIE NATION

NEW YORK, March 29.—Three dozen antique eggs hurtling through the air greeted Mrs. Carrie Nation when she appeared on the stage of a Bowery theatre to-day. Nation had just announced that she had come to do a little talking about Mr. McAdoo how to handle the rum evil of a great city, and that she would start out to-day with her hatchet upon a smashing career, which would mean much to a number of barrooms of the city.

BY CHIP.

By Boston American's Leased Wire.

CHICAGO, March 29.—The feature of the past week in sporting circles, and which will no doubt be the coming subject of interest for weeks to come, or until the all-absorbing question is answered, is: Will there be racing in Chicago this season, and if the different gates are opened will there be betting on the tracks, and will it be possible to secure attendance and privileges sufficient to run and maintain the tracks without allowing betting privileges?

"No betting will be permitted at Washington Park this year. Even the Derby will not be allowed to close gambling" is the information that comes straight from the City Hall, and nothing in a decade in racing in the Middle West has created as great a sensation. "A track cannot run without betting," said John Powers hopelessly, when he heard the news. Powers is one of the principal owners of the disgruntled Worth Track Association, and a big factor in the local racing situation.

May Call It Off.

"It may be that we will have to call it off this season and get a racing bill from the Legislature next season," said Powers.

"If Harrison stops betting at Washington Park, the strongest and most influential track in the country, Tom Barrett will have to follow suit, and stop the game at the country tracks.

"There's nothing to it." So say the wise ones in politics, and the race game."

Assistant Chief Schuettler's campaign against bandbooks and all forms of race track gambling is the forerunner of the Mayor's new, sensational plan.

Even to the casual observer it is apparent that the Mayor would not order a fight to the death on handbooks in the month of March if he intended to permit open gambling at Washington Park in the month of June.

No Winter Pool Made.

The fact that up to date no winter pool has been made on the Derby, as in years past, is pointed to as an additional evidence that the race track owners have received information of the City Hall plan and have seen that the game is too strong for them—at the present writing at least.

Mayor Harrison has been so severely scored on the matter of race track gambling that he has decided to round out his administration in a manner which will win the plaudits of every foe of gambling in Chicago.

Chicago is face to face with a reform administration such as it has not received in years.

JOE GANS WANTS A CHOP AT BRITT

Britt, conqueror of Corbett, is being flooded with challenges. McGovern wants a whack at him, Gans would like a chance, and a host of smaller fry are likewise ambitious.

According to Al Herford, only one pound stands in the way of matching Britt and Gans, the lightweight champion of the world. Hereford has sent a letter to Britt outlining his ideas and suggesting that the men enter the ring weighing 134 pounds. Hereford said that he has been in correspondence with Britt and that the latter is willing to fight Gans at 133 pounds ringside.

During Gans's recent trip to the California coast his manager and Britt had several interviews, during which Britt agreed to draw Gans's color line if the other details could be arranged. Hereford took this as a cue and began negotiations with Britt, should Britt win or lose with Corbett.

Whether the fight between Britt and Corbett involved championship honors has been the subject of warm discussion for the past three days.

Most of the local sporting men contend that the bout held the featherweight title, which belong now to the boy from the Golden State. Corbett strongly maintains he hasn't surrendered the title.

Britt's arm is worse than supposed, and he may not be able to enter the ring again for a few weeks.

LOWERY AND BRIGGS CLASH

Jimmy Briggs, the Chelsea blacksmith, as "Star of the East," will battle with Jack Lowery Monday night at the Auditorium, Portland. Much interest is aroused in his match.

While the past two or three years Briggs has had many tough bouts. Victories over Fred Bryson and Kid Broad manifest his prowess. He is one of the few boxers in the ring that can boast that they stood the limit with Young Corbett. Twice he clashed with Briggs in this city. Both times he was awarded he decision on points, after ten rounds of stiff milling.

Lowery is no slouch in the squared circle. He has fought many hard battles, and has generally come off with the victor's smile. He proved a hard proposition to Kid Goodman, the little Hebrew champ.

EARLY PRACTICE FOR BRIGHTONS

Brighton High School's baseball squad wants to put a kink into the other members of the Junior Interscholastic organization, and to-day start practice at Rogers Park.

SSIs veterans are back in the game. Joe Conley, the captain of the team, will do the bulk of the catching.

Woodlock is the only available slab artist.

Milne will try for second base with E. Curley. Hickey is pretty sure of holding down third. Featherstone will be seen at short-stop, Lonergan in center-field, Doane at right-field, Conant in left garden. Hine, Plout and Jacobs are out for positions.

Brighton will cross bats with Wakefield High at Wakefield, April 23.

SULLIVAN GOT "JACK" O'NEIL WITH BOSTONS

South Boston Representative and Former Ball Player Recommended Him.

Mike Sullivan of South Boston, ball player and member of the Governor's Council, was the means of securing Jack O'Neil his position with the Boston Americans.

While Mike was on a vacation in Brunswick two years ago he began to notice the excellent playing of O'Neil. He liked the youngster's style in both fielding and batting, and when he reached Boston he communicated with Hugh Duffy, who was then manager of the Wilwaukees. Duffy, acting on Sullivan's advice, immediately engaged the "Down-Easter" for his team.

His phenomenal playing with that nine is generally known. He ranked second in batting in the American Association race. His base running was the fastest in that organization.

Henry Killilea at that time was the owner of the Milwaukee team. He noticed the extraordinary playing of O'Neil, and told Jimmy Collins of his ability.

After a conference between Collins and O'Neil, in which Mike Sullivan's recommendation of O'Neil strongly figured, it was decided to trade O'Neil to Boston for the season of 1904.

That O'Neil will make good with the big leaguers there seems no doubt. Mike can pride himself that he was the chief factor in bringing the most promising newcomer of the year to the Hub.

NORWOOD TEAM WILL BE FAST

Norwood will be among the fast semi-professional teams in the state. The nine is receiving its first outdoor practice this week.

Jack Curtin is the captain of the nine. He led the batting average last season in the Massachusetts State league.

Kady, Callahan, Queen and Bray, veterans, will be out for the team. Queen is a candidate for the box. Speare and Bray are striving for backstop honors.

Callahan is assured to hold down the initial bag. B. Corbett is looking for second base laurels. Mahoney is a likely candidate for shortstop. Willis and Lucy are out for third.

It is expected that the garden positions will be cared for by Kady, J. Mahoney and Rogers.

Sunday afternoon a meeting will be held to elect a manager.

GIANTS THINK BOSTON WILL FINISH LOW

List of Guesses by Players Show Vast Confidence in Their Own Team.

That the Boston Nationals are to finish down near the tail end in this year's race for the pennant is the opinion of the members of the New York Giants, as many be seen by the above list of guesses.

This affords an illustration of how confident the whole team is in their ability to finish well up in the race. It was a mere guess by each man, without any idea of mailing reflections on any other club or players, and they all desired this to be understood when they learned that I was to send it on for publication in the Boston AMERICAN.

Cigarettes were in demand to-day by those titanic who took carriage rides at the expense of the Regulars who were beaten in Friday's game. The Weevils, too, smoked good cigars also on the defeated ones, and the victors took a delight that was almost sardonic in blowing the smoke of the fragrant weeds in the faces of the down losers.

The weather was the coldest yet experienced by the players on their trip, probably a string form the tail of the recent blizzard that has been ravaging the North and Middle West.

During the afternoon there was a fanfest by the players in the hotel as they clustered around the steam radiator and congratulated themselves that they were able to rest instead of being out on the diamond carrying around a load of three or four extra sweaters.

The day was beautifully clear and bright, but there was a chill in the air so suggestive of "charley horse," "glass wings" and other dangerous ailments that the corner near the steam pipe felt an cosy as before an open grate fire up North.

TECH CANDIDATES TRAIN.

Track candidates for the Technology team are doing great training these days. There is no doubt but the team will fare well in its competition with the other college teams of the country if their work up to date is any criterion.

TUFTS WILL RUN BROWN

Track Manager George L. Warner of Tufts will try to arrange a dual meet with Brown, at Tufts College oval, May 14. This meet will be preparatory to the intercollegiate meet, which is to be held in Worcester May 20 and 21. To this Tufts intends to send several strong athletes. Warner is also trying to arrange frequent practice meet on Saturday afternoons with Y. M. A. track teams around the Hub.

BILLIARDS ON DOWN GRADE?

With the object of reorganizing to promote and elevate the game of billiards, the Boston Billiard Association will meet in Partridge Hall, Hanover street, tomorrow afternoon. All licensed billiard room managers in and around Boston are invited.

S. E. Wood, E. S. Alexander, C. Blodgett, are members of the committee under whose direction the meeting will be conducted. They believe that the game of billiards is deteriorating. It is their purpose to elevate the pastime, so that it will be better regarded by the public at large.

MEN, PAY ME WHEN CURED

There is but one test for genuine medical treatment, and that is the result it produces. No man should pay for a cure—except cash in the hands of a specialist who has demonstrated his ability to cure by a record of successful cases. No professional person unless a cure is perfected, to stay cured for-ever, should ever accept a fee. No physician should give a written binding guarantee to cure to stay cured for-ever unless he has the power to do it.

BOSTON AMERICAN WOMAN'S HOME MAGAZINE

VENUS UP TO DATE

For Women Over Thirty.

DON'T think you are too old to do this, too old to do that. You are always as young as you feel. People grow old by thinking themselves old.

Don't think that you are forbidden to live a young life, which has a tendency to keep up youthful looks. Woman, while not being kittenish, or a "bud," need never be old in her ways.

Don't think that you are forbidden to think of your looks or to attend to your appearance, because you happen to be thirty. Balzac has said that "a woman of thirty is at her most fascinating and dangerous age"—that is, dangerous to the hearts of men.

Don't make a mistake about it—to be young, to be in the first faint flush of youth is no longer the fashion. The fashionable age for a successful society woman is between thirty and forty.

Don't however, go on the housetop and proclaim to the world that you are forty and glad of it.

Don't attempt repair and preservation of beauty with paints, powders and veils. Take plenty of exercise, stand erect, sit erect. When you speak, let your voice possess volume and energy. When you think, think freshly.

Don't say you haven't time for the afternoon's "forty winks." Take it, and your renewed strength will show in a freshened complexion. A half hour's nap after luncheon will do more to eradicate wrinkles than all the beautifiers in the world.

Don't think that a life of ease and luxury is essential to preserving youthful, delicate looks. A certain amount of work and exercise is necessary to keep the muscles firm and elastic and the flesh hard.

Don't let go of love or love of romance. They are amulets against wrinkles. Not all of the world's homage is poured at the feet of girlhood.

Don't fancy that the dew of youth, with its complexion of roses, is alone able to inspire passion. A woman's best and richest years are from thirty-six to forty. The old saw about "sweet sixteen" is exploded.

Don't be glum if you want to be young. Dance and sing and, above all, laugh. Ride, drive, row, swim, and walk a mile—or make it three—daily. Keep your heart young, and thus defy Father Time.

Don't belong to the "old folks" and nod through the evening hours because your boy is at college.

Don't be afraid that someone will say, "Why, she goes about like a young girl!" If you feel light and easy in motion, why be staid, moping, artificial, because you are supposed to be so, being no longer young?

Don't be envious or disheartened or impatient.

SMART HOUSE GOWN.

THIS dainty gown is just the thing for an afternoon euchre or whist party. It is of pale gray crepe-de-chine trimmed with dark gray ribbon velvet and Bruges lace. It is made over a rose pink taffeta slip, which gives it a wonderfully pretty soft tone.

Handsome Couch Pillows.

HANDSOME couch pillows that are serviceable as well as ever in demand. Novel and attractive ones are made of satin-faced broadcloth, combined with satin. The two are chosen in harmonious colors, and cloth is cut out in some appropriate design, then laid over the satin, which is seen through these openings, and gives a rich and lustrous effect. One seen recently, for example, is of light brown cloth and golden yellow satin. The design in the cloth is oak leaves and acorns, the leaves being cut out and all the design outlined with a ruching of silk cord in a lighter shade of brown. The stems and acorns are further enriched by extra stitches of embroidery, and the edge of the cloth is scalloped and finished with three rows of stitching. The satin makes the under pillow, which is edged with a frill of ribbon, and over it the cloth is laid, the effect of the two colors being a most satisfactory one.

Weariness.

O LITTLE feet, that such long years
Must wander on through hopes and fears,
Must ache and bleed beneath your load;
I, nearer to the wayside inn
Where toil shall cease and rest begin,
Am weary, thinking of your road.

O little hands, that, weak or strong,
Have still to serve or rule so long,
Have still so long to give or ask,
I, who so much with book and pen
Have toiled among my fellow men,
Am weary, thinking of your task.

O little hearts, that throb and beat
With such impatient, feverish heat,
Such limitless and strong desires;
Mine that so long has glowed and burned,
With passion into ashes turned,
Now covers and conceals its fires.

O little souls, as pure and white
And crystalline as rays of light,
Direct from heaven, their source divine;
Refracted through the mist of years,
How red my setting sun appears,
How lurid looks this soul of mine!

—Longfellow.

DRIVEN FROM HOME

A THRILLING LOVE STORY. BY HAL REID.

SYNOPSIS OF PRECEDING CHAPTERS.

At the Maynard farm the father and mother sit quietly talking about their children, Dave and Margie. Dave is an artist. Margie is engaged to Tom Anderson, a young farmer, who overhears her say she is not sure her heart belongs to him. Dave has gone to the city to paint a picture of her love. He tells her that she loves Hamilton Van Cruger. Margie grows angry and sends him away. Van Cruger tells her he loves her and urges her to fly with him. Her father overhears her tell Van Cruger that he has ruined her happiness. He turns her from home. Dave, her brother, goes with her. Van Cruger and Violet Munro, who is in love with him and jealous of Margie, go to the Eldelweiss Hotel. She tells Margie that Van Cruger is her husband. Margie, Dave and Violet arrive later at the same hotel, and later still Tom Anderson comes. Mrs. Maynard comes and finds Margie. Her father sees her with Van Cruger and attempts to kill him.

CHAPTER X.—CONTINUED.

"MY BED I have with me, but your princely generosity has provided me with the necessary funds to dispute. I shall go to a ball—a 'pots ball.'"

"Thwat the divil is a pothow ball?"

"Sweet prince, 'tis a jigger of whiskey, a jigger of gin and a glass of stale beer to mix it in. Your sliver will buy me two, and by the time I have ditted my stomach over them my drawing room will have grown to a marble palace. Farewell! We will meet anon."

"Yes, yes! Yonder is the hotel. No need to ask the policeman."

Maynard, older and feebler than when he was carried to a room at Edelweiss Inn, were making their toilsome way through the sudden storm. Tom bent his head to listen to the faint voice of his aged companion.

"Another weary day has closed, Tom, and Heaven has not seen fit to deliver her into my keeping—my poor old wife, in this city of Babylon, half crazed and alone."

"Don't break down, Mr. Maynard! That will never do. I feel sure that in some way we will find Mrs. Maynard and Dave and Margie, too."

"Don't mention that name to me, Tom. The girl is a foul disgrace to us all. It is her fault that I went mad with fever three months ago—all her fault that her poor mother was crazed with grief when she went away. My wife would not leave me, but watched me day and night, an saved my life, her heart crying out all the time for her young. Her soul kept on longing for the sinful girl who had ruined our lives and her own. Last week she set out in her madness to search for them, and is a wanderer on the face of the earth, alone, half crazed and helpless."

"No, Mr. Maynard! Not alone! There's a Spirit that watches over good mothers, even if it does seem to leave the rest of us to shift for ourselves. I am willing to spend all I have to find her, and, thank God, since the Western mines have turned out so well, there's enough. We will find her and Margie, too."

"I tell you not to mention her name to me again, my lad. She is a blot upon my name."

"Stop, Mr. Maynard! I love Margie, and you shall not demean her."

"You dare to say this to me, Tom?"

The men stopped in the eddying storm and measured each other with angry eyes.

"Yes, I dare defend the girl I love. Think of her what ever you like and the world may think what it will. I know in my heart she is as pure as an angel.

"There, sir, here we part. Your path lies one way, mine another. Good night!"

CHAPTER XI.

They're Lost Somewhere in the World.

TOM ANDERSON regarded the bent old man with deter mined eyes.

"I do not want to leave you, Mr. Maynard, but I can no longer hear you abuse Margie, even if you are her own father."

John Maynard's stern old face was immovable.

"Good night, sir! Henceforth we are strangers."

He disappeared in the storm and the darkness.

Tom started as a queer, crouched figure suddenly rose to a startling height before him.

"Tracked! Fearnaught Zeke has found you. I followed the footsteps and am here to report."

"Yes, Zeke! Have you discovered anything?"

"I have."

"Yes, yes! Zeke! And what?"

"Thet this here New York is a durned big town."

Tom's quick, mirthless laugh was carried away by the wind. Like the scream of his remark, "You are a wonder, Zeke!" It was lost upon the zealous countryman.

"I am it! I am it! I saw a half crazy woman back here, across the street. It may be her, so I thort I would come and tell you."

"O, Zeke! Zeke! Why did you let her go? It must have been Mrs. Maynard! Where did you see her, Zeke! Which way?"

"Down the lane thereaways, by the big bildins."

"Take me there at once, Zeke! Lead the way. I'll follow."

"All right, Tom! This way. Foller me. Fearnaught Zeke will find her. I am it! I am it!"

"Mid pleasures and palaces."

The weak, old voice sang monotonously above the tempest.

"There her," said Zeke. "She's comin' this way."

Tom Anderson stopped and looked at his companion.

"He it ever so humble, there's no place like home."

The voice sounded almost at their elbow, yet suddenly it grew fainter and ceased altogether.

"She must o' turned this corner. Foller me!" cried Zeke.

A man and woman richly dressed, but shivering in their fare, stumbled through the drifts from the street to the curb.

"I tell you, Violet," the man was saying, "the coachman is not to blame. Everything is blocked by the snow. The cars are not running and we will have to walk."

"Home, home,'sweet, sweet home."

The sweet, thin old voice seemed to rise from beneath their feet. The wind blew the folds of the old singer's shawl, like whips, across their faces. Violet Munro gave a sharp glance into the face of the distraught old woman, then impatiently pulled her companion's sleeve.

"Come on, Hans! Why do you stop to listen to the drunken old hag? Let her beg from somebody else."

"He it ever so humble." The singer was unconscious of their presence. "There's no place like home."

"Come, I'm nearly frozen." Miss Munro was petulant. "Help! Help! Won't someone help me find my little one?" There were tears in the voice now. "Oh, I must find them or they'll perish. They're lost somewhere in the world, my little boy and girl!"

Why he paused to listen, Hamilton Van Cruger himself could not have told. A strange curiosity held him. He ignored Violet and her importunities.

"One is a boy with golden hair and blue eyes. He's such a little boy to be wandering like this in the night. The other is a girl, with dark hair and eyes. She is seven years old and he is three. They've run away in the cold and the darkness, and it is time for them to be at home in bed. Won't you please help me to find them?"

"Mrs. Van Cruger!" Violet's voice rose in angry protest. "Have you lost your senses that you stand here in a blinding storm and listen to a besotted old harridan? You may stay if you like. I am going!"

"Come on, Hans!" The mother was crooning to the little ones and pointing to the snow that was heaping itself about her, as if they were there. "See how nice and white and warm the bed is. Come on! I'll turn the covers down and put you in. But say your prayers first. Now I lay me—"

Officer Mulcahy, swinging his arms violently across his breast to keep his hands from numbness, came upon them. The woman looked up with a sudden, heart-wringing cry.

"They have gone again! Oh, help me to find my children. Won't you please help me to find them?"

"I'll have to arrest this hag for vagrancy! She has been begging from us."

"Home! Home! Sweet——"

"Here! Here! None o' this. Move on! If you have a home to go to go there. Come now, or by the eternal I'll run ye in."

The beat figure in black turned the corner.

"Why didn't you arrest her at once and be done with it? These beggars are becoming intolerable."

"Leave the fella on the next beat do that," Mulcahy resumed his arm swinging. "Faith, o'll not be gittin' up in the imperial to appear in court for a common drunk." He walked loftily away.

"Come, dear! Let us go to Martin's for supper. By the way, you did not seem to recognize the old woman."

"Certainly not. Be careful or you'll tumble into that next drift. It's nearly as high as your head."

Violet laughed. "It takes a woman's sharp eye to recognize a woman's memory to recall old faces. She is the mother of that country girl with whom you were in love. Assuredly, my dear, she will be better off in the hands of the police."

(TO BE CONTINUED.)

A MODERN VENUS.

BY BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

The Venus de Milo, as has been remarked before in these columns, is the accepted model of female beauty. Every line and curve has been declared perfect by the highest authorities on art. She is perfectly proportioned, and people journey from every quarter of the globe to visit the Louvre in Paris and gaze on her marble loveliness. When Phidias, the great sculptor, designed her glorious lines he designed woman's shape as it should be, free, broad, unhampered by tight bands and steel cages. Her feet, not pinched in by tight shoes and ruined by high heels, might tread the earth with queenly grace. There might be many a Venus to-day if women would avoid som of the atrocities that fashion urges on them. These figures show Venus as she really is in all her beautiful grace, and as she would look if dressed in modern garments. Imagine her in eel skirt, French heels, corsets, nose veils, pompadour and one of those deplorable hats! Poor, lovely Venus! even her beauty could not stand the test of modern style. The dotted lines in the dressed figure show the original waist and foot line. The small figure shows the famous beauty just as she stands in the Louvre—gracious, calm, queenly—a perfect emblem of womanhood. Girls, try and remember that small waists are neither pretty nor healthful. A few generations of wasp-like waists and the only Venus on earth will be her majesty of the Louvre. You are the mothers of the future, and it is your duty to make yourselves strong, fine women, not puny fashion plates.

A Dinner of Souls.

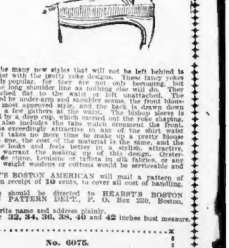
THE latest fad in Paris is dinners of souls. Each guest impersonates some celebrity not only in costume, but by speech and manner, by accent, and by repeating celebrated quotations, provided they fit the occasion. This sort of entertainment can only be appreciated by people of intellectual pretensions. It requires some study and a general knowledge to make it a success.

Hairdressing in Fiji.

NO one has visited Fiji in the past without being astonished at the fearful and wonderful styles of hairdressing. They are geometrical, monumental, pyramidal trapezoidal. An interesting fact in this production of the grotesque is that the hair varies in color as lime varies in bleaching power, or as the juice of the mangrove in coloring matter. Between black and white, the colors run through the blue-black and all shades of red and yellow. Often half the hair is red and the other half white, giving a kind of piebald effect.

Hearst's Boston American Pattern.

Ladies' Shirt Waist.



Among the many new styles that will not be left behind in the shirt waist world this season, the fluffy lace fancy that are dressy enough for any occasion, is the most becoming, but to carry out the long slender line as much as possible, the fullness may be confined flat to the waist at the front, the waist is fitted by under-arm and shoulder seams, the front blouse ing in the most approved style, and the back is drawn down snugly with a few gathers at the waist. The bishop sleeve is gathered into a deep cuff, which is turned out the wrist. The pattern also includes the tab trimming and collar. This design is exceedingly attractive made of any of the dainty materials. It takes no more time to make up a pretty blouse than a plain one, the cost of the material is the same, and the effect the former looks dressy and feels better up in clothes, attractive waist, easy to make, looking up of this design. Organdy, batiste, crepe de chine, lawn, linen, and all of the lighter weights of the light weight woolens or cottons would be serviceable and dainty.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN will mail a pattern of the above on receipt of 10 cents, to cover all cost of handling.

All orders should be directed to HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN PATTERN DEPT., P. O. Box 3290, Boston, Mass.

Kindly write name and address plainly.

OLD FRIENDS WELCOME "PEGGY FROM PARIS" AGAIN

Enthusiasm Over Her Return at the Tremont—John Drew in "The Second in Command."

Other Local Playhouses, Presenting Many Attractions, are Crowded with Patrons.

Henry W. Savage's peripatetic "Peggy from Paris" pirouetted prettily at the Tremont Theatre last evening, on her second visit to Boston. In tuneful lyrics, she sang her way into the hearts of college youths and gallery gods alike. She captivated her new friends with her sprightliness and chic, and revelled for the old ones the delicacies in which the girl from Hickory Creek, Illinois, found herself in a Chicago Theatre when her relatives appeared upon the scene and threatened the disclosure of her identity.

The old saying that "nothing but wine improves with age" is given the lie. "Peggy from Paris" is the proof of the assertion, for the piece is more pleasing than ever, with new songs and fresh jokes galore.

Beginning with the ovation accorded winsome Helen Hale, all the principals received "hands" that must have made their hearts glad in this conservative burgh. Georgia Caine, as Miss Fleurette Clarenelle, or "Peggy from Paris," wore her beautiful gowns and sang her gay chansons as though she were made for just that and nothing else. Josie Sadler, as Sophie Blatz, sang the Henny song to the tune of six encores, while Paul Gleason's tell, and Grace Baker danced again and again until they were forced to stop through sheer weariness; and still the insatiable audience clamored for more.

Alice Hegeman did stunningly on during an interval and gave an imitation of Patti's farewell performance, while George Richards (just from the Hickory Creek Revelry Trumpet a few blasts or, the latest news of the day in song, to the accompaniment of a Sousaesque stunt from the leader of the orchestra). Helen Hale, as Lily Ann Lynch, was irresistible as the "home-grown article," always proves. Paul Nicholson, "king of the prairie actors," responded several times to encores. In fact, seldom does a production receive so cordial a welcome on a second visit to Boston as did this product of George Ade's facile pen. The closing girl and collegian, autograph fiends and flunkies, contributed much to the brilliancy of the piece. And with the audience so responsive and sympathetic, "Peggy's" first night in Boston was a great success. People went to be amused, and they were. "Sister Mary Jane's Top Note" was something new in the laugh line, and drew a thin the attention of the audience was divided between the stage and the gallery. They wanted to see the result of the gurgling giggles; but only those who sat next know, and they would not tell, that the "top note" received a hearty recall from the audience, and applauded without knowing why.

If the first night is any criterion, "Peggy from Paris" is destined to enjoy a repetition of its former success during the run here.

Drew in "The Second in Command."

John Drew appeared as Major Christopher Bingham in that successful Marshall play, "The Second in Command," at the Hollis Street Theatre, last evening, and the local verdict is that the star and the performance scored a great success Many of his admirers thought that they had never been seen to such advantage. He got curtain calls at the end of each act and the audience was quite beyond itself in enthusiasm for this house. It is safe, however, to feel that he was with his friends and was eager to exert their appreciation by his efforts. As a good-hearted, patient and sunny-tempered British army officer who is determined to be cheerful under the most exasperating circumstances, Mr. Drew is given a chance for display and his deft touches in simulating humor and pathos. If the play had only given the star a chance to be lored as well as the highest martial honors, the audience would have had the Major, as impersonated last night, did not get a whit more than he deserved. The supporting company was seen in new roles and was also pleasing, the performance being very creditable as to ensemble. The theatre was crowded by an audience that was as fashionable as it was generous in plaudits. This is the last week of Mr. Drew's engagement here.

MOTHER GOOSE'S SECOND WEEK

Another full house flocked to see "Mother Goose," her golden eggs, her sparkling witticisms and her sprightly songs in the incomparable stage setting which modern theatricals have provided for this ancient heroine. It is chiefly as a spectacle, of course, that "Mother Goose" appeals, but, on top of that, the splendid singing of famous funmakers is responsible for the great popularity of the piece. Last night the audience reared itself into fatigue over the three extra comedians, Joe Weber, W. H. Macart and Harry Bulger. The same striking stage-pictures was, as usual, the old Oaken Bucket," with its broadly farcical realism of the iron hoop and the same covering.

IMEDAL AND MAID! POPULAR.

For the opening of its second and last week the Medal and Maid company was in the immense Boston Theatre—last evening to greet the "great girl show," "The Medal and the Maid." Not in a long time have such commendatory remarks been made of the chorus as those one is heard about the lassies with walking and singing parts in this piece. They are a pretty lot of girls, childhood, and pretty in the extreme, they received a large share of the generous applause. "Jimmy" Powers, of course, lacked not in the way of encores, and was the recipient from the floor and galleries, while Hugh Vincent, the "Irish tenor" of the Elish girl "with an air," sang and danced her way into the hearts of everyone she appeared on the theatregoers, at the head of the female array. Nellie Reed was the Medal Maid, and pleased with their remarkable

"SERGT. KITTY" AND VIRGINIA EARL.

At the Globe Miss Earl and her tuneful company of singers opened the second and final week of "Sergeant Kitty" before a good-sized audience last evening. The star was especially pleasing in her comedy lines, and, of course, in her singing, warm applause greeted her efforts. Those in the hit her work. Little McCrea made plenty of fun and Robert Parr sang acceptably. The principals whose work was noteworthy were Sylvian Langlois, George E. Mack, Carrie Perkins, Estelle Wentworth and Grace Belmont. Miss Earl made her engagement with the two performances on Wednesday. No Wednesday matinee will be given.

"A SON OF REST" STILL POPULAR.

Another big house greeted Nat M. Wills at the Majestic in "A Son of Rest" last evening, laughed over his sallies and his troubles, and went away satisfied that his tuneful ditties. This is the final week. From the time the curtain went up there was something doing every minute. The show ran nearly three hours, and the only time when the audience was not laughing was when the curtain fell between the first and second acts.

GRAND OPERA HOUSE.

There is nothing quiet about "The Great Train Robbery." At the very beginning there is introduced a pot to rob an express company of the trifling amount of $50,000, in order to cover up their part in the robbery the plotters plan to throw suspicion on the heroic young man who is beloved by the beautiful young girl. The sudden bursting in of somebody who had no business to be changes their pans so that they have to hold up the train. That is the beginning of the excitement. From the moment when the conspirators and their fellow-conspirators use dynamite in their efforts to get at the treasure package, the stage is never without its bit of excitement.

There is no doubt that the show pleased the large audience. The calls were insistent for Alfred Rowland, who played the leading part, and Miss Lucille Sterling, as Alice Bennett, daughter of the railroad superintendent and sweetheart of Tom Gordon, on whom the train robbers wished to throw all the blame.

KEITH'S THEATRE.

Sidney Grant was the big hit at Keith's last night, where a strong bill is being brought out this week. Grant is an imitator for Alfred Rowland, who played the leading part, and Miss Lucille Sterling, as Alice Bennett, daughter of the railroad superintendent and sweetheart of Tom Gordon, on whom the train robbers wished to throw all the blame.

ELEANOR WHITNEY IN "PEGGY FROM PARIS."

RICHARD STRAUSS AT SYMPHONY HALL.

The attention of all musical Boston centered in Symphony Hall yesterday afternoon, where Richard Strauss sat at the pianoforte and played, with his wife, Mme. Strauss de Ahna, sang a number of songs. In spite of the most remarkable video, notably lacking in color, Strauss received a great deal of applause, a tribute for which the generosity personality is perhaps partially responsible. David Bispham pleased everyone in his rendition of "Count Arden," being human, sympathetic and realistic in his singing. Ibri Sersiner rendered setting to the poem, as played by himself, got the tune's share, naturally. The composer has treated the themes of the boy's faith and love in a masterly fashion, and his every position made a deep impression on the really discriminating audience. Herr Strauss played yesterday with unusual reserve and delicacy.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, MARCH 29, 1904.

No Wonder Some Actors Are Vain.

How Is it Possible for a Man Who Lives in a Dreamland of Egotism to Admit Life's Cold Realities?

Our very able French neighbor and friend, Le Courier des Utats Unis, supplies interesting facts concerning the memoirs of a certain famous French actor.

This gentleman gives statistics concerning his stage life.

Read a few of the facts that he gives out, and ask yourself whether it is not wonderful that any actor should be, as many actors are, free from vanity and self-illusion.

The actor in question, in the course of his stage career, has IN PLAYS been married 1721 times.

He died on the stage 1120 times, and died in many different ways. He was STABBED 61 times, SHOT 51 times, DROWNED 22 times, POISONED 168 times. His skull was crushed 86 times. Blood vessels in various parts of his system burst, with fatal results, 192 times. Thirty-one times he had his head cut off. One hundred and nine times he was murdered. Thirty-three times he was executed by law. He committed suicide 314 times and died a natural death 55 times.

We all of us know that few human beings endure, with mental balance unimpaired, the excitements of an ORDINARY life of success.

The average man loses his head because he makes a little MONEY, acquires a little temporary AUTHORITY, or succeeds in obtaining the light that comes with passing NOTORIETY.

If a man is bewildered because, for a few moments or a few hours, his life is more exciting and triumphant than that of the ordinary human being, what must be the effect upon the actor of a continual state of phantasmagorical positions, transitions, which come with his life on the stage?

From a quiet, peaceful life in a boarding house where his greatest excitement is the buying of a new necktie, he goes to the stage, and appears at once as a soldier carrying a spear.

If he succeeds, he is a Roman Emperor in a few weeks with half a dozen lines to say.

He becomes a little more successful and appears as a villain.

Later he presents fortunes to deserving orphans, finds missing wills, commits murders, saves lives.

And whatever he does, there rings in his ears the bewildering and deceiving applause as the curtain goes up or down.

A young WOMAN can become an actress, withstand all the compliments and excitement, because a woman's life, at least in her extreme YOUTH, is a period more or less of artificiality. Scores of young men praise her, flatter her, and the stage presents no very great change from life's realities.

But for the humdrum man, who puts on tights and has his face painted and a wig fitted to his head, stage life is absolutely bewildering and unsettling.

We should not wonder that so many actors appear in court in divorce cases, that actors of really great ability are found to be impossible in ordinary business dealings.

The distinguished Samuel Johnson, speaking of a woman who preached, said that when a woman preached, her case is very much like a dog walking on his hind legs; we do not criticise her way of preaching—we wonder that she is able to preach at all.

Similarly, when an actor, in the midst of his life of absolute artificiality, excitement, vociferous applause and delighting triumphs, shows lack of mental balance, we ought not to be surprised at his display of vanity, egotism, selfishness or baseless arrogance.

We ought to be amazed that he is able to retain his sanity to any extent at all.

The RURAL Mail Deliverers Are Lucky

The Express Companies' Trust Carried Them Through.

In Washington the other day, as you know, the Republican Administration SO FRIENDLY to the workingman, SO ANXIOUS to benefit him, through the tariff and otherwise, refused unanimously to increase the wages of the LETTER CARRIERS IN THE CITIES.

On top of this refusal they voluntarily added something to the pay of the deliverers of mail on rural delivery routes. There had been no insistent demand for this increased salary to the rural mail carriers. But there WAS a first class Republican reason for giving those carriers a little extra money.

The mail carriers on the rural delivery routes have been in the habit of obliging the farmers by carrying parcels for them; barrels of flour, hams, all sorts of necessary supplies, were delivered at the farmer's door by the rural mail carrier, in return for a very reasonable charge.

THE EXPRESS COMPANIES OF THE COUNTRY, UNITED IN A POWERFUL TRUST, CAPABLE OF GENEROUS CAMPAIGN CONTRIBUTIONS, WANTED THIS SYSTEM OF OBLIGING THE FARMERS ABOLISHED.

They insisted that the rural delivery carriers should stop acting as expressmen, stop obliging the farmers, and stop INTERFERING WITH THE EXPRESS COMPANIES' MONOPOLIES.

The orders of the Express Companies were promptly obeyed by that same Republican Administration which had contemptuously rejected the appeal of the letter carriers, backed by the entire people.

The order was issued, and it now stands, that no rural carrier must do any express business. He must supply his own horse, mind you, and his own wagon, at his own expense—or else go on foot through the muddy country roads, carrying from one to three hundred pounds. But he must NOT deliver any package or anything that would free the farmer from express company rates.

Another little thing was to be considered—that fact that this would irritate the farmers very much, and that, unless some sop were thrown to the rural carriers, THEY, irritated in their turn, might turn the farmers against the Republican Administration, which loves them SO MUCH.

Consequently the rural mail carrier's salary is raised to the magnificent sum of sixty dollars a month, BECAUSE THE EXPRESS COMPANY TRUST ISSUED ORDERS TO THE GOVERNMENT, AND BECAUSE THE GOVERNMENT FEARED TO IRRITATE AT THE SAME TIME BOTH CARRIERS AND FARMERS.

Gentlemen of the working classes and others: if you want anything from this particular Administration, from this particular trust-controlled Government, try to interest SOME TRUST in your case. Whatever you do, under our present system, don't be foolish enough to rely on the support of the ordinary common people to get you what you want.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox Gives a Test of True Friendship.

COPYRIGHT, 1904, BY JOURNAL-EXAMINER AMERICAN.

BY ELLA WHEELER WILCOX.

Did you ever notice how strangely you were answered by seeming accident ofttimes when you were asking yourself a mental question?

Not long ago an unpleasant experience befel me. I was requested to reprove one whom I knew to be the aggrieved party.

The injustice of the request struck me, and my response indicated my attitude. I said what I knew to be true and right, even though the saying meant the antagonizing of the stronger power.

Afterward so much anger and bitterness and resentment followed that I found myself wondering if a neutral position in the matter would not have been the wise one for me on that particular occasion.

Scarcely had the thought entered my mind when the Woman's Tribune was handed me with my morning mail, and the first words my eyes fell upon were the following lines by Hattie Tyng Griswold:

"Who fails to strike when man's assailed,
For fear of selfish pain or loss;
Who weakly cowers when Right is nailed
Upon the proud world's heavy cross;
Who fails to speak the splendid word
Of bold defiance to a lie;
Whose voice for Truth is faintly heard
When party passions mount on high—
That man's a coward; and no deeds
Of valor done on fields of strife
Can prove his courage."

Surely it is no accident which gives one such an experience.

I am confident that Spaces is companionable with invisible Presences who hear our silent thoughts and seek to hold converse with us.

Some Good Guide sought to rebuke me for my coward thought, and bade me find those written words an answer to my query.

In life it is to discover the dividing line between officiousness and helpfulness; between interference and championship, and just when to keep silent regarding the affairs of your friends.

There is a good-hearted officiousness well meant, but unwise, which results in more trouble than the malicious machinations of an enemy.

There is a silence which springs from the fear of interference, and from a belief that everything will unravel itself if left alone, but which is misunderstood by the observers and wrongs the innocent.

To take the brave and right middle pathway between this Scylla and, Charybdis is the test of delicate and courageous friendship.

The more we learn of humanity, the more cautious we become in interfering with the affairs of others. The tendency of education and experience is to lead us away from unpleasant entanglements with other lives.

The highly cultured man never wears a chip upon his shoulder. Disputes and quarrels belong to the unevolved.

But let us beware that we do not carry this idea so far that we become moral cowards.

"And fail to speak the splendid word of bold defiance to a lie."

The Gusher-Girl, A Not Unusual Variety.

BY H. R. R. HERTZBERG.

An oil gusher ceases to gush in the due course of its career and settles down to do things without noise or display. But a girl-gusher is incurable.

You girl-gusher will gush all her life, on her death-bed, and afterward, unless the strictest kind of anti-gushing laws obtain throughout the hereafter. Let us hope—in chorus—that such laws have been registered and are enforced in both places.

Some girls are born gushers, but other girls are gushers by conviction. The latter are entitled to one more conviction calling for twenty years in solitary confinement.

There is nothing in the world that the confirmed gusher-girl will not use for gushing purposes. She will even gush over another girl, if that other girl is sufficiently plain.

But after all, the "young man" is her principal gush-trough. He has the sweet substance poured into him until he resembles the molasses-barrel of a grocery.

If he happens to stand possessed of sense, the saccharine matter will not agree with his system for any length of time.

Unfortunately the trouble with the average "young man" who associates with the gusher-girl is that there are more curls in his hair than there are convolutions in his brain.

That is why the gusher-girl continues to exist.

Because, despite the fact that the feminine disposition inclines to the different sin always, no variety of woman flourishes for any length of time unless that variety finds a corresponding class of men willing and anxious to put up with it and bid it flourish.

Now, in a few men like beer grease on their heads. Not a few men, on the same principle, like gush in a girl's manner and conversation.

You can't account for taste, particularly the taste of persons who haven't any.

It is to be believed, however, that ultimately the gusher-girl will have to go. Her departure will come shortly after that of the cuirass-corset and the stilt-heel.

Then the two words "perfectly lovely!" will be given a rest, of which they stand fearfully in need. Then, also, the "young man," or as the gusher-girl calls him, "the perfectly sweet young gentleman," who now enjoys being gushed at will have become as totally extinct as the megalotherium or the dinosaur, and may be caricatured by cartoonists of the future as one of a series of "Human Errors of the Past," or something to that effect.

Only a consummation of that kind looks almost too good to justify belief.
